April 28 Pool Bid Deadline

DEXTER - The deadline for submitting bids for construction of the $100,000 swimming pool is April 28, it was announced at the city council meeting Monday night.

The bids will be opened at 7 p.m. at the civic center.

Last month the council, upon the recommendation of the pool committee, voted to contest the wage and hour schedule suggested by the state for construction of the pool, charging it was too high.

The revised schedule lists electricians wages at $3.50 an hour. The previous schedule was $5.31 an hour. For the common laborer the previous schedule of $2.95 an hour was reduced to $2.625 and the cement worker from $3.85 to $3 an hour.

Wage scales for the carpenter, $3.50, and plumber, $4.91, remained the same in the new schedule.

Dowdy recommended that the council accept the new schedule, which was adopted.

The pool is being built with $50,000 in matching federal funds. A $75,000 bond issue was passed Nov. 15, with the additional $25,000 to be used for park improvements. The new pool will be located in Airport park on the east side of the city.

It was reported to the council that residents have tried to purchase city stickers without having paid city personal taxes. Ordinance requires that the taxes must be paid before the city sticker can be purchased. The council approved a motion to let the ordinance remain the same and gave police the authority to arrest any resident without a city sticker.

The council also discussed the need for motorcycles to display city stickers. A check of other cities showed that Sikeston charges $2 and Poplar Bluff $5 for city stickers for motor-

Captain Shot Down In Viet Nam

NEW MADRID -- Capt. Jerry L. Bennett, 28, air force pilot, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Bennett of LaForge community, was shot down Sunday in Viet Nam, while carrying supplies to troops.

A message was received here from his wife, Mrs. Shelby Bennett, who with their two sons, live near Clark Field in Manila, the Philippines.

The telephone message confirmed a report that Bennett received burns in the crash.

His co-pilot escaped serious injury. Three members of the crew were killed. Neither Bennett or his co-pilot were captured by the enemy.

He was flying a C-130 Hercules. Bennett has been stationed in Viet Nam for a year. He graduated from New Madrid high school in 1958 and from of the United States naval academy in Annapolis in 1963.

He then transferred to the air force.

He is a nephew of Clovis Lancaster, Elmer Bennett, Mrs. Harlan Phillips and Mrs. Philip Gossett, all of Sikeston.

14th President

Weaver Predicts New M.U. Era

COLUMBIA -- Dr. John C. Weaver, speaking as the 14th president of the 128-year old University of Missouri, said he viewed his formal inauguration as president today as a "moment for reorientation, rededication, of inauguration for a new era of opportunity and development" for the university.

"This is not an occasion to be centered on an individual," he disclaimed.

"Perhaps it is not so much at vague institutional aspirations that we should look as at the more explicit expectations which . . .(we). . .have for the University in the days ahead."

In his talk, Dr. Weaver spoke directly to the faculty, the students, and to citizens of Missouri on his philosophy of education.

To the faculty, Dr. Weaver pointed out:

"Both relevance and responsibility in education today demand teaching techniques and course and curricular objectives which prepare young people to face a life of fast moving and accelerating change.

"There is one further aspiration that I would hope to find emergent in this faculty. Let us strive for excellence, but excellence for its own sake and of our own consensus and definition. Let one of our prideful expectations be that the University faculty shall build new levels of scholarly accomplishment on each of its campuses, and that accomplishment shall not bear the label of imitation, but rather the imprint of distinction wrought in a mold of our own unique design.

"We must not only lead young people to a competence to handle today, but we have a desperate need for intellectual radar capable of sensing enough of what lies ahead to be able to refill the rightful expectation of youth that they will be handed an effective 'hot line to tomorrow.'

"It is hard to argue against the claim that in the intellectual arena of our time it is in science 'where the action is.' The work of science has become well-directed, dead serious and preoccupying.

"Science may be 'where the action is' and it may be that history will adjudge the edifices of science to be the most enduring expression of our civilization. But we have a mighty important obligation to be sure that in education not all the action and not all the edifice-building is in science.

"The onrush of science and technology is producing problems in economic, social and philosophic realms at a rate we are quite unable to handle. Clearly citizenship is broader than the perimeters of science."

To the student, Dr. Weaver said:

"No human institution has more reason than an educational institution to deny or stoutly resist any philosophy which would submerge the paramount importance of the individual. Knowledge can only be held and ultimate wisdom can only come to individual minds.

"With students of the four campuses of this University I would urge as my most fundamental expectation that though already large and though necessarily growing larger ways can be found to make education a warmly human experience for individual people, one by one."

"There is a third great audience of expectation that both surrounds and joins us here this morning -- the people of Missouri and their elected and appointed representatives, Dr. Weaver continued.

"On many fronts the expectations of this audience are clear enough. Missouri presumes that her state university will provide high quality, low cost undergraduate education to good students in all of the basic fields of learning.

"Beyond this the state-wide University is charged with the specific mission of providing strong graduate and advanced professional programs in comprehensive array.

"Beyond instruction, Mis-

Sikeston Firm Low Bidder

HAYTI - Parthenon Construction Company of Sikeston submitted a low bid of $1,017,400 on Hayti's 104 low-rent housing units.

Five contruction companies submitted bids. In addition to Parthenon, the companies and their bids were:

Buckley Construction Co., of Fenton, $1,068,800;

Horltsman of Silverman Construction Co., of Detroit, $1,099,500;

And Hoel-Steffen Construction Co., of St. Louis, $1,351,314. The Parthenon's bid was approved in a meeting of city public housing authorities and Butler and Associates, a Springfield consulting firm. The board's recommendations will be sent to Urban Renewal's regional office in Fort Worth, Tex.

A Public Housing Authority spokesman said that the Fort Worth office will act within a week.

They will be built on three sites, two in the northwest section of Hayti and the third in northeast.

Wife Looks Forward to Return of Her Husband

Mrs. Sara Sampson, 907 South Prairie, is looking forward to the return of her husband, Capt. William Sampson, who is serving as chaplain with the army combat Aviation Battalion at Holloway Air Field near Plekiu, Vietnam.

Mrs. Sampson said her husband formerly served as pastor of the Webster Hills Methodist church in Webster Groves. He has been in the army two years. He and his family lived at Ft. Sill, Okla., before he went to Vietnam.

Captain Sampson received a medal for valor in saving soldiers' lives at Holloway Field by driving an ambulance through enemy fire. He has been recommended for the bronze star.

He also received the Vietnamese medal of honor and has been helping to build an orphanage near Plekiu.

Sampson is due to return from Vietnam May 21. He met Gen. Maxwell Taylor during his stay in Vietnam, Mrs. Sampson said.

Mrs. Sara Sampson, 907 South Prairie, carrying her youngest son, Robbie, 1 1/2, buys a ticket to hear Gen. Maxwell Taylor's speech on Viet Nam at the annual Chamber of Commerce man of the year banquet at 6:30 p.m. Thursday at the Armory. Her husband Capt. William Sampson is serving as a chaplain in Viet Nam. Chamber of Commerce Secretary Linda Rowland is seated. Billy, 6, and Cathy Sampson, 5, look on. Mrs. Sampson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Canedy, 708 Courtney.

Turnpike Bill Eyed

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- The House today began arguing the merits of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' plans for building toll roads, but almost immediately became enmeshed in a web of conflicting amendments.

Basically, the bill would set up a toll road authority composed of the State Highway Commission and the governor. Revenue bonds would be used to build and operate the turnpikes with the tolls to pay off the bonds.

Senate sponsors were skeptical about the bill as it passed there and agreed it should be tightened in the House.

Two amendments were approved by the House Roads and Highways Committee but when the bill reached the House today new versions of restrictive amendments were offered.

If the bill is substantially changed by some of the amendments the whole issue is almost sure to be forced into a House-Senate conference.

Dexter Library Has Art Show

By Warren Sokolis

DEXTER - An art exhibit of 46 paintings, prints and drawings by children in Maryknoll mission schools was held at the public library Monday in observance of National Library Week.

The young artists, ages 8-18, are students in Maryknoll mission schools in Bolivia, Maiu, Taiwan, Peru, Hong Kong, Korea, Japan and the Philippines. The missions take the children in for education.

On display were works in watercolors, collage, pen and oils.

Mrs. Grundy Turlington, librarian, and Mrs. Paul Reed and Mrs. Ferd Sturm, assistant librarians, were hostesses. Cookies and coffee were served.

The exhibit will be shown in Stoddard county schools the rest of the week.

Stir in Haywood City

HAYWOOD CITY -- This slumbering Scott county town is coming to life.

Until recently even its status as an incorporated town was in doubt.

The town never has collected any taxes.

The 500 to 600 inhabitants will make their first trip to the polls April 25 to elect five town trustees.

It took an affirmative ruling from the state attorney general's office before its residents knew whether they were an incorporated town.

Haywood City, or The Sands as some refer to it, is located three miles west of Blodgett in the center of the county. Its Negro inhabitants scratch out a living as farm laborers, day workers or at small factories, or anywhere else they can get a job.

They have no paved streets, no street lights, no water or sewer systems, no sidewalks.

But they are an incorporated town, and have been since 1960 when citizen's petitioned the Scott County Court to incorporate. Their request was granted and a temporary board was appointed consisting of Henry Jefferson, Elza Cain, Bryant Moore, Tom Hampton and Afert Godbolt.

The new board met after the charter was granted but dissident elements so disrupted the meeting that another one

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

It is unfortunate that the United States doesn't have strong governors on both coasts.

If it did teachers in the Bronx might not be living in terror.

More than half of the teachers in a junior high school there refused to return to the classroom because school officials would not curb rowdyism.

The teachers complained about carrying heavy work loads while they were fair game in the hallways for young toughs, who feel assured that they won't be punished if they beat, maim or knife a teacher.

What the teachers sought reasonably enough and what they didn't get was a commitment from the school superintendent that future trouble-makers would be suspended.

Instead the spineless superintendent offered to study the problem. A study always is the easiest way to do nothing. It is a despicable, pussy-footing tactic.

Teachers considered a demand for combat pay. This isn't far fetched. Teaching is a hazardous profession in corrupt New York City, so designated by the city council. The council has asked the state legislature to extend disability benefits to teachers.

Just how New York City expects to recruit teachers let alone keep the ones on the job is difficult to understand.

What New York needs is a do-something, no-nonsense governor like Ronald Reagan in California rather than a do-nothing governor like Nelson Rockefeller, who doesn't want to lose the ruffian vote or any other vote.

It would help, too, if New York Mayor John Lindsey had the courage of any convictions which may hold about enforcing the law and restoring a semblance of safety to what he has chosen to call the "fun" city.

NEW 'TECHNIQUES' SINGS THE MESSAGE

Be not disappointed if, picking up the latest GPO Document that is out, you cannot find escapades containing rocket-firing motorcycles or Aston-Martins dripping with keen gadgets.

The document, "Techniques of Soviet Propaganda", is as good a spy thriller as is on the market because it's as true as it is well-written. There are plenty of devious plots and machiavellian machinations to keep you reading on, more than chilled by the realization that Soviet propaganda is fueling the communist conspiracy with finesse that makes the clever Goldfinger look like Mr. Butterthumb.

The document is crammed with vital information so deftly and delightfully stated it will steal the reader's time to the point of grand larceny - only he'll never know whether the good guys will win or not.

"Techniques" is the completely rewritten and updated version of a 1960 predecessor. Thanks to the talented and authoritative Suzanne Labin and the word-wizardry of Lee J. Adamson (who collaborated with Miss Labin on the no nonsense book, "Vietnam: An Eyewitness Account"), perhaps othe GPO documents may soon adopt this new, fresh approach to the care and feeding of more interesting GPO documents. Not that the others are dull, this one sings.

This Labin-Adamson work is filled with factual gems, the like of which would do justice to the most imaginative fiction. It's all real - so real that those who read it will reach a new dimension in understanding the communist mind and how it goes about trying to win converts.

One passage from "Techniques" is enough to convince. In the section on communist infiltration of the press, the authors write:

"The confession of Aleksandr Kaznacheyev penetrates...further into the dark abyss of press infiltration. Kaznacheyev was a young attache of the Soviet Embassy in Rangoon, capital of Burma, who chose liberty in 1959. As a typical professional product of communist conspiratorial training, he had attended the specialized schools of Moscow for ten years... He studied psychology, languages, the art of poisonous sophisms, photograhphy, printing, bridge, sports, the use of a silenced pistol, and guerilla warfare . . .

"His work consisted of processing articles received on microfilm from Moscow, drafted in their entirety by Russian propaganda agencies. Picking them up in the Embassy cellar, he translated them into Burmese or English, embellished with local color, and placed them in the large Rangoon newspapers, Newspaper of the People, New Light, and the English-language Mandalay Ludu, over the signatures of underground Burmese on the newspaper staffs . . . Once published, Kaznacheyev forwarded clippings to Tass News Agency, which made a great deal of noise about them, stressing the point they were genuine products of Burmese political opinion."

Slick, smooth, and absolute proof that those who apologize for communist behavior ought to hock their Phi Beta Kappa-Keys to pay for a trip to the head shrinker's.

But there is more. Labin and Adamson reveal that Kaznacheyev called on his training as a forger and whomped up a masterpiece in the form of a letter attributed to U.S. Admiral Frost. The Russian had Frost saying that the U.S. would support anticommunism in the Sumatran insurrection against President Sukarno of Indonesia. It was a most delicate maneuver because it automatically branded Indonesian anticommunists as tools of Washington. The Admiral did protest to a salty degree, but suspicion had been planted sufficiently to make protest futile. Kaznacheyev admitted the forgery three years later.

Typical of the document's lean sentences that positively sprint is this one alluding to the intellectual laziness in the free world - thanks to Moscow's monumental ability to make its listeners believe all that isn't so:

" . . Western leaders . . .believe that the Soviets regard a conference, a treaty, and a minister as a conference, a treaty, and a minister, whereas the Kremlin has actually made of them a trap, a rag, and a menial respectively.

And:

"We crush the taxpayers to forge a steel breastplate with which to face the Kremlin on the battlefield, while in the struggle for minds we furnish television time to communist-serving intellectuals whose wiles paralyze resistance to the Kremlin."

There's a mountain of meaning there, indeed. It has the sort of mind-joggling, sensible exhortation that does justice to the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee that was its originator, the Congress, and the authors who did such a masterful job of communicating a vital need of our time. It ought to be bought by the hundreds and circulated among the millions of Americans who couldn't care less about Soviet propaganda, even as they are being brainwashed by the Red artisans of distortion, lie and infiltration.

SPENDING OR SAVING?

Poor Richard is almost a villain in the Great Society. In a consumer-oriented economy, a penny saved is not necessarily a penny earned. All things being normal, any banker would rather loan money than borrow it. Frugality does not make the mare go.

These simple if slightly disturbing truths explain in part why government economists have been worrying in recent months. The American consumer has not been behaving according to form. With plenty of money to spend, he has been going to the bank instead of the store.

The latest data are, however, reassuring. Retail store sales sprinted to a record in March after a string of sluggish months. At a seasonably adjusted $26,474,000,000, March sales were up 4 per cent from the year-earlier level.

Retail sales had been almost flat since first crossing the $25-billion mark in March 1966. In February they reached $25,636,000,000 but still were disappointing to economic soothsayers.

Consumer credit and consumer purchasing are closely related. Consumer credit continued to grow in 1966, but at a sharply reduced rate. As the Federal Reserve Bulletin puts it: "To a large extent the pattern of credit use has paralleled developments in consumption expenditures. Sluggishness in spending for automobiles and other durable goods, for example, has been translated into reduced demands for credit. Moreover, the timing of changes in spending and credit has been broadly similar."

When people stop buying, retail merchants start reducing inventories. That means they stop ordering from manufacturers. Hit doubly, in a sense, the manufacturers cut back production. Eventually workers have to be laid off. And to complete a most unattractive circle, more people of necessity stop buying. That's the way some recessions start.

Consumers spent close to $5 billion less in the last three months of 1966 than they had in the previous quarter. At the same time their savings rate jumped one percentage point to 5.9 per cent of disposable income. As recently as March 20, Impact, a business letter circulated by banks and other financial institutions had warned: "At worst the economy could be in a recession and in desperate need of strong fiscal action."

Savings and loan associations across the nation experienced a first quarter of 1967 savings gain of $2.1 billion. This was a rise of 169 per cent over the first three months of 1966, according to the U.S. Savings and Loan League.

The "savings - no spending" trend was influenced by a very early Easter. Bad weather, including extreme cold in many parts of the country, certainly didn't help retailers. The biggest slump, aside from the already mentioned sluggishness in the automobile market, was in refrigerators, stoves, and other heavy appliances. Women's apparel orders were off because of a kind of freakish switch in fashion tastes.

Now there is new hope on New York's Seventh Avenue. Spring-summer re-orders are coming in from stores at a stronger rate. Early fall bookings appear promising. It's too early to tell, but business in general may get better.

Motorists were warned today by Colonel E. I. (Mike) Hockaday, Superintendent of the Missouri State Highway Patrol, against any false security which overtakes many drivers with the better weather conditions of spring.

"Last year our spring traffic deaths soared from 108 in March, to 118 in April and 130 in May. The 1966 record was the highest in the State's history, 1,379 fatalities. Such a prospect, if repeated, is enough to take the joy out of driving in the warm months ahead."

The Patrol Superintendent pointed out some of the driving hazards associated with this time of the year and showed how motorists can safely meet them: Respect and expect sudden spring rain showers. Reduce your speed and increase your following distance when it rains; Concentrate on your driving. Don't let the beautiful scenery distract you from your main job of driving; Children are out in great number, watch for them as you drive through residential areas and near playgrounds; Drivers are also out in great numbers this time of the year. Even secondary roads, at times, may be crowded. Keep alert to the road situation ahead of you and be prepared for anything; And, winter driving is often hard on a vehicle's vital safety parts. Have your vehicle checked before you take that spring vacation.

"This spring we will again face the same seasonal hazards of increased traffic, higher traffic speeds, sudden rain showers and the other dangers connected with this time of the year," the Colonel continued. "I urge you, therefore, to show more alertness, more caution and more courtesy as you travel the highways.

"As drivers and pedestrians, make this the spring of your lifetime, not the last springtime of your life," he concluded.

PAUL'S RIDE

Paul Revere's horse galloped down the country roads. The life of the colonies depended on his warning the people that the British were coming. He approached a farmhouse.

"Is your husband at home?" he called to the woman feeding chickens in the yard.

"He's back in the barn, Paul, she answered.

"Tell him to get his musket and go to the village square. The Redcoats are coming!"

The exchange of words had taken but an instant; Revere's horse had not broken its stride. The famous patriot thundered off toward the next farm.

"Is your husband at home?" Revere called to the woman in the doorway of the next farmhouse he approached.

"He's asleep in his room, Paul," she said.

"Tell him to get on his clothes," Revere cried, "The Minute Men are meeting at the village square. The British are coming!"

Horse and rider galloped on to still another home.

"Is your husband at home?" he called to the handsome woman who leaned out the window.

"He's gone to New Amsterdam and won't be back 'til Sunday," she said.

DO YOU WORRY ABOUT YOUR SPEECH?

A man by the name of Paul J. Meyer heads a sales stimulation organization in Texas and has been eminently successful. Early in his sales life he perceived that he needed instruction in speech - making which would also improve his selling talk. So in time he invested more than $5000 in such improvement courses.

Maybe you've heard him make a speech. You'd never know that he had ever made a speech before. It is an ordeal to listen to him. He hems and haws, he gropes for words, he seems to be in mortal agony trying to explain his simple proposition.

But what is the audience doing? It's trying to help him make the speech. When he reaches for a word you reach for it, too. Instead of distress you feel sympathy for the man.

That is exactly what he wants. He does it deliberately -- even scientifically. He attains that all important empathy almost immediately.

"You are at my level," he explained.

CINDY AND HER PRINCE CHAP

The trouble with Britons is, they don't appreciate literary genius, modern style. As proof, consider the sad tale of Dennis Potter, a playwright by trade. Or so it is alleged.

With a slight assist from the Brothers Grimm, Potter puttered around and came up with a tale about a girl named Cinderalla. This he entitled "Almost Cinderella." For reasons that may never be explained, this bonbon was bought by someone at the British Broadcasting Corporation, and that genius and/or others decided it was a perfect offering for Christmas Day. But then there was a surprising switch, and the BBC announced that it was not either going to present Playwright Potter's potion.

Why? Well, that you'll have to figure out for yourself.

Just about everyone knows the story of Cinderella and how the fairy godmother of this sweet young thing not only got her to Prince Charming's ball but made her the stellar attraction at the Prince's wedding. A nice, wholesome story but strictly for squares. So Potter putted it around a bit and came up with a version suitable for Britain's far-out set, including the Mods and the Rockers.

The potterized version dressed Cindy in a miniskirt and a sneer. Not only was Cindy contemptuous of her nasty Aunty and her disagreeable cousins, she had no use for anybody. Which proves that blood is thicker than water.

Befitting such a beastly female, Potter gave her an appropriate soul-mate in a Potterized Prince Charming. You could call him a bit of a nut, and still be charitable. As Potter put it: "Prince Charming comes out as a comewhat unstable character who has sexual problems because he can't find satisfaction with other girls."

Other girls?

Having created such a delightful couple, Potter provided an appropriate story. To sum it up, the Prince strangled his new girl friend. At midnight. And since this tidbit was scheduled for Christmas broadcast, that would have been about the time the shepherds saw the Star.

We're glad that someone at the BBC had sense enough to strangle this weird one - before midnight. Now the question is: What network will buy it for the American audience?

Doc. Duncan Says

Most folks agree our Nation should have expert military men who have spent their life training for defense of our nation. However, most agree they should be under civilian control, some say they are like a prize fighter, their thoughts lean toward fight over and above any other solution and are not prone to consider right or wrong. Under our form of Government the people are supposed to have the last say, party politics barred.

H.L. Hunt Says

NEW OUTBREAK AT BERKELEY

The latest fantastic outburst on the campus of the University of California at Berkeley provides unmistakable proof of the folly of trying to appease irresponsible agitators.

A policy of appeasement has been followed by University of California authorities ever since the "student rebellion" two years ago. This policy is similar both in its presuppositions and its practice to the foreign policy of appeasement toward the external communist foe so long practiced by the State Department.

Mass law - breaking by students at a university simply cannot be tolerated if real education, which is the university's sole proper business, is to continue. If it is tolerated, then education gradually ceases to be offered or accepted.

Since the riots two years ago, many of the best and most responsible teachers and students have left Berkeley, not to return. Classes have been bodily taken over by agitators. Faculty members in sympathy with the rioters have spent many class hours in "discussion" of the riots and their causes, instead of teaching their subjects.

The latest outbreak was triggered by the mere appearance of a man wearing the uniform of the United States Navy at a table provided for him by university authorities in the Student Union Building. One wonders whether he would have escaped unharmed if he had also had the temerity to bring with him an American Flag.

The minority of mentally disturbed misfits who lead and inspire these "demonstrations" should be curbed. The tax-paying public which provides the funds for state universities has every right to demand that they guarantee a suitable atmosphere for real education. HLH.

NEW YORK (AP) — Curbstone comments by a sidewalk Socrates:

What would happen if actress Jayne Mansfield were given an injection from the brain of the late mathematician, Dr. Albert Einstein?

Might it help make her figure better?

This and many another conjecture has been raised by two scientific experiments which indicate that specific information can be transmitted from one creature to another by brain extract injections.

The experiments at Baylor University's College of Medicine and Queens College of the city of New York were done on mice.

The problem for the mice was to learn their way out of a maze. Evidence was found that beginning mice solved the problem quicker when given injections of brain extract from other mice who had earlier learned the best way out of the maze.

Naturally, if this be true on a broad scale, it is too good a technique to limit to mice. If it helps them get out of a maze, why can't it also help people solve the problems of the human rat race?

Parents by the thousands will drag their churlish, reluctant children to scientific laboratories with such requests as:

"I want my son, Irving to be a doctor. What do you charge for three injections of medical brains? better yet, make him a specialist. How much for 10 injections?"

"My daughter I would like to see in Radcliffe. Her brains seem okay in English and gymanisum, but she's terribly weak in Ancient History brains, Greek brains, and Social Science brains. Can she get all the injections she needs today, or do you want her to come back tomorrow also?"

"Our little boy is fine in nursery school in everything but group attitude. His teacher says he is far too aggressive. Would you recommend perhaps an injection of mice brains to help give him a meeker personality?"

There are no end to the possibilities, of course.

A husband with a wife chronically unable to balance her bank account could well threaten her with divorce if she refused to be injected with brain extract from an obliging accountant.

A wife with a husband unable to earn her a decent living might want to mortgage their small home to raise funds to inject him with extract of a millionaire's brain.

There is also the probability that criminal syndicates would get into the act. They could start selling brain extracts of famous people on the black market, and secretly water them down with brain extract taken from Bowery bums and broken- down horse players, eager to make a fast buck.

Aside from the threat of chicanery involved in creating a mass brain extract market to help everyone achieve instant wisdom, there is a practical limitation: There aren't that many brains around. And most of the people with good brains aren't about to dilute them for the benefit of others. They choose to keep them for their own use.

As Euclid said long ago, "There is no royal road to learning."

Despite what science may do with mice, people will have to go on learning with the brains they were born with.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The petition of the four ex - employees of Sen. Tom Dodd, D-Conn., to reopen the Dodd probe because of insufficient investigation presents an important challenge to the senate. It highlights what many senators do not seem to realize, that congressional prestige is at an all - time low and they need to clean house vigorously to protect the reputation of the most important legislative body in the world.

The staff members' letter lists careful, sobering charges against one of the 100 highest lawmakers of the United States and cannot be ignored. Members of the Senate Ethics Committee have already brushed it off, but the public will not.

Reason given by ethics committee members for not further investigating the staff members' charges is that they are based on stolen documents. This is beside the point. For the four staff members can testify of their own knowledge regarding most of the transactions which they listed in their damning letter.

Furthermore, no less than the former Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach has stated that the so - called "stolen" documents are admissible as evidence.

So there must be other reasons for the reluctance of the Ethics committee to probe these incriminating charges.

One obvious reason is the reluctance of senators to investigate another senator. This was all too evident at the start of the Dodd case, when the ethics committee did not move until Dodd himself requested an investigation.

Long before this, however, many senators had known that their colleague from Connecticut was not on the up and up. You cannot serve nine or ten years with another man in a body of only 100 without forming some definite ideas regarding his ethical conduct.

That was why Sen. William Fulbright, D-Ark., once spoke out on the senate floor criticising Dodd for having once been a foreign agent. Fulbright, D-Ark., once spoke out on the senate floor criticising Dodd for having once been a foreign agent. Fulbright knew, as did some others, that Dodd had received a fee of $50,000 from the Guatemalan government just after he left the House of Representatives. One of his last acts while in the house was to get $15 million of foreign aid voted for Guatemala.

When Sen. Fulbright referred to this in the senate floor, however, his remarks were stricken from the record.

Sen. Dirksen, R-Ill., also knew that Dodd had trouble carrying his liquor, and at one time rebuked him on the senate floor.

It was also evident from Dodd's absentee record that something was wrong. Almost no other senator was absent so much from vital committee work. Obviously he was engaged in other things.

Yet no senator moved to investigate Dodd. Only after this column had published a long series of itemized episodes showing amazing connections with Gen. Julius Klein, a paid agent, and various other conflicts, did some of the more courageous senators -- Wayne Morse, Ore., and Steve Young, Ohio, Democrats; with John Williams, Del., and Jack Miller, Iowa, Republicans, diplomatically prod the ethics committee regarding its investigation.

Another reason why the ethics committee may be loath to probe further into the unprobed charges of Dodd's staff members is that Dodd's law practice is involved, and at least three senators have law practices which sometimes get mixed up with legislation.

The electorate, however, is inclined to take a dim view of senatorial law practices. In 1958, Sen. John Bricker of Ohio, one - time GOP nominee for vice president, was shown to have backed legislation favorable to the Pennsylvania railroad while his lawn firm in Columbus accepted legal fees from the Pennsylvania.

Sen. Steve Young, using this ammunition, defeated Bricker.

LOWER ETHICAL STANDARDS

What many senators don't realize is that the ethical standards of congress have dropped drastically today compared with the old days.

Toward the end of the Coolidge administration, William P. Vare, Republican boss of Pennsylvania, staged a primary campaign against George Wharton Pepper in which Vare spent around $700,000. The senate rose up in its wrath and refused to seat Vare on the ground that he had bought his election.

At about the same time, Sen. Frank Smith spent $125,000 in the Illinois primary, contributed by utilities magnate Sam Insull. The senate also refused to seat him.

During this same period, Truman Newberry, Republican, spent a fortune to defeat Henry Ford in the Michigan Senate race. As the senate investigated the expenditure, Newberry resigned.

Today, it's reported that Republicans Ronald Reagan in California and Nelson Rockefeller in New York spent three to seven million on their campaigns for governor. The electorate didn't lift an eyebrow.

This is one reason why Sen. Russell Long's proposed fund-raising through a $1 income tax check-off had potentials. You shouldn't have to be a millionaire or get in hock to big campaign contributors to run for high office.

In 1925, Sen. Hiram Bingham, powerful Connecticut Republican, permitted Charles L. Eyanson, a representative of the Connecticut Manufacturers Association, to sit in an executive session of the Senate Finance Committee while the Smoot - Hawley Tariff Act was being written. For this Bingham was officially censured.

The ethics of congress have dropped a long way from that day. And it will require drastic action by both the senate and the house to get them back to a high level again.

Wide Range of Human Interests Catalogued

That gives a superficial description of the range of books in the public library.

Many persons go to the library repeatedly for a specific type of book or for knowledge in a single area. They are in a rut. For the individual with bird dog instincts the library is a happy hunting ground.

Like to browse in a book store? You'll find the same pleasure in the library.

One way to simplify browsing and to speed the process is to consult the index file, which many persons avoid as they would a contagion. Another, of course, is to roam through the stacks.

The more the index file is fingered the more ways library patrons discover that it can be used. It is cross indexed. Books are listed both by title and by author as well as by general type. For example there are numerous books listed under the key word "insurance."

The topics covered embrace the full range of human interests.

Perhaps you have enjoyed a book by a particular author. By all means find out other books he has written which are on the library shelves. This can be a most rewarding discovery.

Perhaps you are a television or a radio devotee and read little. In the process you may have become interested in television personalities.

You'd be surprised how many books have been written by people in the entertainment and theatrical worlds and how many books have been written about them. If you read about them it will sharpen your interest in the television programs you watch or the radio programs to which you listen.

You'll enjoy the movies and the theater more.

No dedicated sports fan should neglect the library. The shelves are loaded with sports books, both fiction and nonfiction, written by sports personalities and about them.

The library index file will give you an idea of what's available but don't rely on it completely.

It's all right to sample the contents but ask the library staff to help. Some books defy a precise category. They may be grouped in some particular section of the building, well known to the staff but obscure to you.

One word of caution. There are two book card index files on the floor. One is for adults and one for children. Unless you want to see what is offered for children go to the adult file.

Supplementing the index card files is a set of three volumes that is more useful to human bird dogs bristling with curiosity. It is a set titled "Books in Print" and that is exactly what it is. These books give the titles of books in print and their authors. One volume lists books by general subject matter.

Suppose you find a book listed in these volumes which interests you. Ask the library staff if it is available or search the index card file.

If it isn't, all is not lost. The public library can ask the Missouri State Library at Jefferson City if it is available there.

The cost to the library patron is the postage one way and books can be mailed at a cheap postal rate. Usually the book can be delivered in three or four days.

Book stalking is a wholesome habit easy to cultivate just as is bird watching, girl watching, coin or stamp collecting or any other hobby. Give it a try.

Rev. Jose Santiago To Speak Wednesday

The Rev. Jose M. Santiago, approved for missionary service in Ecuador, South America, will speak at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the First Assembly of God church, 310 South Kingshighway, the Rev. T. A. McDonough, pastor, announces.

The Rev. Mr. Santiago, a native of Puerto Rico, has been pastor of churches in New Britain, Conn., and the White Plains, N.Y.; served as chaplain of migrant workers in Wisconsin and taught at the Spanish American Bible Institute, Bridgeport, Conn.

During this special missions rally, he will tell of the missionary work in which he and his family will be engaged in Ecuador. There will be music.

Being a nation founded on concern for the individuals -- his freedom, his welfare, and his pursuit of happiness -- it is all the more ironic that today our concern with the techniques for achieving many of these goals has somehow pushed the individual into the background.

Hello! Winning the City Tourney Doubles with Dorothy Templeton must have inspired Brenda Boardman because she has really been toppling the pins since then. She had high game of the week last week with a big 228 game and Jo Spitzmiller took high series with a 562. That's good bowling in anybody's language.

FRIDAY BOWLETTES

Medical Arts 4- Canvas 0, E. P. Coleman 4- Pucketts 0, Vogue 3- I S Co. no. 1 -1, Potlatch 3- Ziegenhorn 1, Nowells 3- I S Co. no. 2-1, Proffers 3- a local radio station 1.

Sandy York had both high game and series for this league with a 187-490.

DELTA KEGLERS

Reiss Dairy 4- Parker - Curtis 0, Ziegenhorn 4- A & B Pastries 0, El Capri 3, Barketts 1.

This is one of the smallest leagues in the City Association and must have some of the highest averages in the association. The Tuesday Morning Housewives league had lots of high average bowlers but it was also a 10 team leage. It was in this league that Brenda Boardman and Jo Spitzmiller had the highs for the week. Other big games and series were Brenda Boardman had a 554 series, Jean Lee 534-202, Glenda Becker 521-201, and Norma Baker 504.

ROYAL KEGLERS

Wades 4- Ferrell 0, C. D. Alcorn 3- Holyfield 1, Bank of Sikeston 3- Liberty 1, Busch 3- Mutual of Omaha 1, Malone and Hyde 3- Lewis 1, 1st National Bank 2- General Oil 2.

Norma Baker had high game of the night with a 210 and Mary Meyer had high series with a 558.

NEWCOMERS

Ruby Andres had both high game and series in this league with 173-476. Team no. 4 had high team game with a 795 and also high team series with a 2243.

IMPERIALETTES

Darla Carter was really hitting the pocket last Tuesday and came up with a high game and series of 207-518.

Judy Ford on the Auxiliary Police team was unable to bowl last week and we missed her. She has been quite ill and the last report I got about her she is in the Methodist Hospital in Memphis, where she will probably remain the rest of this week, but she is better.

There were only a few recorded splits picked up this week; Jean Wilson 5-7, Alice Patterson 5-6-10 Dorothy Templeton 4-5-7, Irene Bruner 4-5, Ruby Smith 5-6-10, and Ann Yarnell 5-10.

Have a good time this week and we'll see you all next week.

PEOPLE are also judged by the company they keep away from.

Joe Creason.

Judges were from New Madrid County.

Study Reports Children Of Suburbia Shortchanged

By Joy Miller

NEW YORK (AP) - Are the children of suburbia—growing up in pockets of affluence and a likeness—being properly prepared to live in a world of people who are different in nationality, race, religion and economic background?

For four years a group of teachers, sociologists and researchers, supervised by Dr. Alice Miel of Columbia University, concentrated on a typical American suburb to find the answer. The results of their study, made public today, add up to an emphatic "no."

Although the parents say they moved to the suburbs in the first place "for the children" and "to have better schools," the report states, "in one aspect of their education suburban children are underprivileged.

"Though other races, other nationalities, other generations have a great deal to teach them, there is little in their education, formal or otherwise, to familiarize them with the rich diversity of American life.

"In this sense, despite the many enviable features of their environment, the children of suburbia are being shortchanged."

The study focuses on a community not far from New York city which is called New Village. Dr. Miel refuses to disclose its real identity, but says it strongly resembles suburbs around the country.

Growing up in New Village means a youngster has practically no encounter with people different from himself. His life and social contacts are almost totally controlled by his parents, whether or not the parents realize this.

"He depends on his mother to chauffer him wherever he goes. As a result, he knows little beyond his own home, the very similar homes of friends, the school and the inside of the family car; he is largely insulated from any chance introduction to a life different from his own," says the report.

The researchers observed that the children learned to be hypocritical about differences at a very early age, that their supposed tolerance was only skindeep. "The prejudices of their society were still very much with them, but they had had it drilled into them that it was 'not nice' to express such feelings."

One hopeful thing, the report says was that a good many parents united in desiring more emphasis on certain kinds of human difference, such as their children learning about nationality differences and achieving respect for other faiths.

"Many parents and teachers were found eager to bridge religious differences; many recognized, however uneasily, the need for discussion of racial differences. But with a few notable exceptions, neither parents nor schools were facing up to economic inequality.

Knowing nothing about people less well off than themselves the study points out as one of the "most appalling" gaps in the children's learning. "Moreover, their attitude toward the less fortunate was almost insufferably patronizing -- a response that was not surprising in view of the great emphasis placed on material wealth in New Village, as in most suburbs."

The report by Dr. Miel, with writer Edwin Kiester Jr., was published as a pamphlet titled, "The Shortchanged Children of Suburbia" by the Institute of Human Relations Press of the American Jewish Committe. It profiles the suburban child this way: he is "likely to be a materialist and somewhat of a hypocrite. In addition, he tends to be a striver in school, a conformist, and above all a believer in being 'nice,' polite, clean and tidy. He is often conspicuously self-centered."

In all these respects, says the report, he patterns his attitudes and goals chiefly after those of his parents.

New Village teachers handled matters of human likeness and difference in these ways: some avoided the subject entirely. Some practiced "Afghanistanism"—declaiming over the conditions of the heathen in the far-off corners of the world while ignoring the unsolved problems in one's own backyard. Where they were aware of the need for social learning, they seemed "overwhelmed by the difficulty of discussing such delicate matters," says the report.

Dr. Miel indicts the schools for often neglecting opportunities to help children judge the worth of people; for not developing self-confidence in the children but instead tending to make them feel only views conforming with the majority should be expressed; for not giving them help in managing their own learning—"too often they accepted the world of authority without question."

In the report she includes an action program for schools and communities that would (1) develop higher thought processes and encourage children to plumb controversial subjects, (2) Foster understanding of the student's own community, (3) Help children attain some insight into their own values and those of others, and (4) Develop an emphatic understanding of others.

Dr. Miel, who is professor of education and chairman of the Department of Curriculum and Teaching at Teachers College, Columbia University, said in an interview that she doesn't expect spectacular results from the report. She does expect some resentment from parents. But she hopes it will encourage parents, teachers and communities to do something about the problem.

"It's a survival question for ourselves, in addition to the humanitarian aspect," she says.

Yesterday's winners will meet Wednesday at 3:30 p.m. for the right to meet the top bracket winner for the tournament title.

Today's action at VFW stadium will find Bloomfield and Advance battling, starting at 3:30 p.m.

Richland, after going down in order in the bottom half of the first inning opened up the bottom half of the second with a single by John Coffey. He moved to second on a sacrifice bunt by Gaylord and scored on an error by the first baseman for the first run.

The Rebels added two more runs in the inning as Ed Taylor, who reached base on an error, scored on Carroll Dean's double. Dean scored as Jerry Taylor singled for a 3-0 Richland lead.

Bell City pushed across its first run in the fourth inning after Richland added one in the bottom of the third on two hits, and two stolen bases.

Richland was never threatened as southpaw Gaylord kept his opponents off stride with his sidearm, herky jerky motion . . .He struck out 10 men in seven innings of pitching, while walking two.

Leonard Rampley, the losing pitcher for Bell City, struck out nine and failed to issue a walk while giving up eight hits.

Richland added its final three runs in the fifth inning on two hits and two Bell City errors.

Bell City's final runs came in the fifth and sixth innings. One was scored in each inning as a base hit. Errors played a major role in the scoring.

Danny Pullen collected a triple for Bell City while Gaylord smashed a two-run homer over the right field fence in the fifth inning, for the only long hits.

Pounding 13 hits off losing pitcher Amon Ring, Scott County Central made a surprising comeback after being down 8-0 in the first inning to whip the winless Pirates.

Matthews opened up the first inning with 13 men at bat and scored eight runs on four hits. It seemed to be on its way to victory after Ring got past the first inning allowing no runs. He pitched out of a bases loaded and no out situation.

Central put its first scores on the board in the second inning, scoring five runs on four hits and two bases on balls. John Lee and Larry Boley collected the big blows for Central in that inning, connecting on a double and triple respectively, back to back.

After going scoreless in the third, Central forged its way to within one run of the leaders with three hits and two runs, 8-7.

Matthews threatened in the sixth inning, having bases loaded and no outs, but failed to score as winning hurler, Morris Karnes, struck out one and got fine backing from the field for the other two outs.

Central pushed across three runs in the fifth and sixth innings for the come - from - behind victory. John Lee and Boley collected triples for the winners. Matthews failed to get an extra base hit.

Stephen Miles was the hitting star for the winners, going three for three. Pearson and Ring collected two hits each for Matthews.

Griffith Upset In Title Fight

NEW YORK (AP) — Boxing had a new Golden Boy today in handsome Nino Benvenuti, Italy's first world middleweight boxing champion on his decisive upset of Emile Griffith in a spectacular 15-round fight.

"Sure, I'll be happy to fight him again," said the 28-year-old as he left Madison Square Garden Monday night with the resounding cheers of the pro-Benvenuti crowd of 14,251 still ringing in his ears after his unanimous decision victory.

"We'd like to put on the return bout in the Garden in July," said Harry Markson, the Garden's director of boxing who was pleased with the $141,799 gate for the televised fight.

"It was a sensational fight and should be a complete sell-out. There's a handshake agreement between the managers for the return fight but I'd like to get it on paper."

Benvenuti, called The Intellectual in Italy because he likes to read books and talk about them, certainly had the book on the 29-year-old Griffith.

The fast-punching Italian, taller by 3½ inches and heavier by 5½ pounds-159 to 153½, dropped the 13-5 favored champion in the second round with a short right and was floored himself by a long right in the fourth,

The pro-Benvenuti crowd roared "Nee-no, Nee-no, Nee-no" as the challenger finished with a flourish, taking the final round with a determined attack even though he had the decision wrapped up.

Referee Mark Conn and judge Leo Birnbaum each had Benvenuti the winner on rounds, 10-5. Judge Al Berl had it 9-6 for Nino. The Associated Press scorecard had Benvenuti in front, 10-5.

The challenger was nicked on the bridge of his nose in the second round and cut deeply in the same place by an accidental butt in the seventh round. Griffith's left eye was half closed and he was lumped under the right eye.

"I knew I had him after the sixth round," said Benvenuti. "I trained for this like I never trained before. I wanted very much to knock him out but I'm very happy that I won. I wanted it so much."

"The kid won a beautiful fight," conceded Griffith. "He's a wonderful champion, and I hope to fight him again. I enjoyed the fight, I really did.

"But even Sandy Koufax got knocked out of the box once in a while."

Griffith referred to the former pitching great of the Los Angeles Dodgers who retired from baseball after last season.

Griffith had won eight straight title fights as a welterweight and then middleweight champion.

He won the middleweight crown from Dick Tiger a year ago and then beat Joey Archer in two defenses, all in New York. His over - all record is 52-8.

Benvenuti's record is 72-1. His only defeat was a disputed 15-round decison that cost him the world junior middleweight crown at Seoul, South Korea, last June 25. He was edged by Korean Ki Sim-Soo.

NEED MORE WATER? YOUR OWN WELL MAY BE THE ANSWER

Is this statement true? "Only a few families living in the sticks get their water from a well anymore. Wells are obsolete in the 20th century."

It's false. Wells are an important part of modern living for more than 25 percent of the U.S. population. Nearly 10 million families depend upon individual wells for their total water supply, according to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau. They live not only on modern farms but in urban areas beyond municipal water mains.

In the past few years, individual wells have also assumed a new importance as a supplemental source of water in areas that have municipal systems but where shortages force local governments to curtail use of water. About 50,000 such supplemental wells are drilled each year, and their number is expected to double or triple in the next few years because, almost everywhere in the U.S., there's plenty of water underground.

The modern well isn't half as picturesque as the old-fashioned one with its romantic "old oaken bucket" but it's considerably more efficient. The motor is electrically powered and is likely to be a submersible that's installed right in the well, where it can neither be seen nor heard. The well itself is about four inches in diameter and is sealed after being sanitized.

There's no hand-carrying of water from this 20th century electric appliance. As the water is pumped to the surface, it goes first to a storage tank. From there it's piped to the water-using equipment in the home in the usual way.

If you'd like to know more about the possibility of having your own well, write for a free booklet to the Ground Water Resources Institute, 205 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. 60606. Ask for "How Water Wells Help You Solve Your Water Problems - Easily and Economically!"

150 Honor Myers Family at Reception

At a reception given in honor of Peter C. Myers, Canalou, at the Country Club 150 came out to greet one of the nation's outstanding young farmers and his family.

The reception was sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, after Myers won the award for the Sikeston area, and for Missouri before being selected as one of four winners in the nation at Harrisonburg, Va.

Myer's prize trophy was on display at the reception.

A second honor was bestowed on him and his wife, Mary, when the Federal Land Bank Association by Manager Hal Robertson presented him with a certificate. The certificate was inscribed:

"In acknowledgement of outstanding leadership in this community and distinguished service to agriculture and its related interests, the federal land bank association of Sikeston is honored to present this certificate of recognition to Peter Myers. Presented April 15, 1967, in this golden anniversary year of the federal land bank system."

Mrs. Myers was presented a silver bowl by the Jaycees. Past President John Sides of the organization was in charge.

HOUSE, SENATE SWING INTO ACTION ON BILLS

JEFFERSON CITY -- With little more than one-third of the legislative session remaining, the Missouri Senate and House of Representatives swung into action last week on some of the more controversial bills on their calendars.

The House passed the controversial school bus bill by 91-71, which proposes a constitutional amendment be passed by the people to provide state aid to buses for children attending private and parochial schools.

The bill, expected to receive a rough ride in the Senate, was felt by some House members to have passed only because it is not the final decision, but must first pass the upper house and then be approved by a majority of the voters in the state, either at the next general election or at a special election called by the governor.

Rep. David Rolwing (D-Charleston), a Catholic, said of the resolution: "We who support private and parochial schools should support them all the way. We will be losing our right to dictate what can be taught in our schools if we accept money from the state."

Rep. James I. Spainhower (D-Marshall), a Christian minister, said submitting the resolution to the people would cause untold damage to religious relations. It does not have a ghost of a chance of passage if submitted to the people. It would just stir up a lot of trouble."

In addition, the House passed a proposed constitutional amendment that would remove household goods from the personal property tax. There was no debate on the bill, which was passed 108 to 46.

By a close vote of 84 to 73, the House passed a teacher tenure bill, which its sponsor, Rep. Charles Sheehan (D-House Springs), called a "personal dignity" bill providing security to teachers.

It would require school boards to dismiss teachers only on the grounds of disability, immorality, incompetence or unsubordination. The officials would be required to give their reasons in writing.

Teachers would be entitled to a hearing and could appeal board decisions to the circuit court. Three successive years of teaching would be required for them to qualify under the law.

The bill has received great criticism from school administrators who feel this bill will only add to lower quality teaching if they cannot dismiss teachers without fear of reprobation.

The Senate entered the fray of controversial measures last week when it passed the congressional redistricting bill 28-5.

A federal court ordered the reapportionment because the present districts were much further from the one man-one vote rule.

Sen. Omer H. Avery (D-Troy) and chairman of the Senate Apportionment Committee, said the districts varied from 2.5 per cent over the norm of 231,-981 in the 1st District to two per cent under in the 10th District of southeastern Missouri.

Sen. Robert A. Young (D-St. Ann), who is thought to have had aspirations toward the 1st District seat, voiced objection to the bill because his airport townships would put him in the Republican 2nd District of St. Louis County, instead of the 1st represented by Rep. Frank M. Karsten, (D-St. Louis).

By consolidation of their voting power, St. Louis Negroes could elect Missouri's first Negro congressman under the Senate proposal, as most of the Negro wards in St. Louis would be placed in the 1st District. However, Rep. Karsten has been noted for his service to the Negro community.

The political makeup of outstate Missouri would remain relatively unchanged.

The bill has undergone several changes since first introduced by Sen. Avery and probably will see more alterations before both the House and Senate reach an agreement.

BILLS SHOW VARIANCE IN SALARY INCREASES

The Missouri House and Senate may be at odds over how much they feel the voters will accept in salary raises for top elected officials and for legislators.

The Senate last week passed a measure which would increase legislators' salaries from the present $4800 to $7200. A House bill which has not yet received committee approval would raise legislators' salaries to $9600 -- double the current salary.

The salary of the governor would be increased from $25,-000 to $37,500; Lt. Governor from $12,000 to $16,000; attorney general from $15,000 to $25,000, and other state officers from $15,000 to $20,000.

The House already has given preliminary approval to salary raises for top elected officials which varies from the Senate bill only on the governor's salary -- raising it to $40,000.

The Senate legislative salary raise would cost the state about $1.5 millions while the House proposal for legislative salaries would involve a $3 million increase.

"SHARED TIME" TO FACE RELUCTANT SENATE

Senate Majority Leader William B. Waters (D-Liberty) said last week that the House - passed "shared time" bill will face tough opposition in the upper house and may not receive approval in this session of the Legislature.

One of Gov. Warren Hearnes' major legislative proposals, this bill would allow handicapped and educationally deprived children attending private and parochial schools to receive special training at public schools during the regular school day.

The House passed the bill three weeks ago after long debate. It was sponsored by House Education Chairman James I. Spainhower (D-Marshall).

David Belsheim Honor Student

CONCORDIA -- David Belsheim, son of Rev. and Mrs. Harold G. Belsheim, 207 Kramer Dr., Sikeston, was named to the third quarter list of honor students at St. Paul's college high school.

Belshein is a senior.

To qualify for the list, a student must achieve a grade point average of at least 3.25, a B average.

No Plans for Maternity Ward at Cape Hospital

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- Sisters of St. Francis Hospital state that there are no plans for a maternity ward in the new $10-million hospital to be constructed at Gordonville and Mount Auburn roads.

They list the precise reasons for their decision. Given as the prime reason for the decision was the noted decrease in the birth rate during the past few years.

Presently, a campaign is being conducted to raise the $1 million needed in local funds for construction of the hospital. The other $9 million will include investments by the Sisters of St. Francis as well as federal funds and loans.

In the letter, the Sisters wrote:

"Hospitals have only one purpose and that is to serve humanity. Therefore, St. Francis Hospital must strive to serve this area in the most effective manner. Unfortunately, in planning the new St. Francis Hospital there has been a great deal of emotional controversy concerning the obstetrical department. As it now appears, the new hospital will not include an obstetrical division, but if and when there is a need, that need will be supplied.

"Since it will be another two or three years before the actual construction on the new hospital will commence, an increase in the birth rate at that time may warrant an obstetrical department in the new St. Francis Hospital. If this happens, the Sisters will gladly consider the incorporation of such a department.

"However, as of now, the Sisters of St. Francis Hospital and the Advisory Board believe that it would show a lack of stewardship by using the public's money to build another facility which is already provided by other hospitals.

"Rather, the administration believes that plans and money can better be invested by providing services which are vitally needed for the health program of this area, such as a modern psychiatric division intensive care unit, cardiac units and pediatrics.

"A survey was made of the surrounding hospitals which presently operate modern obstetrical departments to see what the administrators from these hospitals have experienced throughout recent years.

"Figures quoted were appalling regarding the decrease in the birth rate especially during the past two to three years. In 1961, one of the hospitals had an average rate of more than 200 births per month, and in 1966, this same hospital had a birth rate of about 68 per month.

"Another hospital has had a decrease to the extent that it had less than half the number of births in 1966 as compared to 1963.

"The last hospital contacted had a birth rate averaging about 59 or more monthly, but in 1966, this average was reduced to 38 births per month.

"Before St. Francis Hospital closed the obstetrical department in June, 1966, it was a general rule rather than an exception to the rule to have one or two mothers in the maternity division with the same number of infants in the nursery.

"Nevertheless, this department had to be adequately staffed with professional personnel 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

"In keeping abreast with current literature and other news media, the national statistics show a decrease of 21 per cent in maternity cases during the past year. The Blue Cross Digest stated in its March 25, 1967, edition, "Births in the United States during 1966 totaled 3,629,000 the smallest number since 1950.'

"The number of births in 1966 was 131,000 below the 1965 figure.

"Viewed objectively, would the above statistics justify the building of a costly department -- space-equipment - personnel-wise? This facility would necessitate labor rooms, delivery rooms, nurseries, premature nursery, isolation nursery, formula room, circumcison room, a fathers' room, as well as beds for the mothers which would probably be vacant much of the time.

"Observing this from a realistic approach, it would seem most unfair to utilize the public's money to duplicate a facility which hospitals in the surrounding areas already adequately provide."

Soviet Press Ignores Nikita's Birthday

MOSCOW (AP) - Former Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev today celebrated his 73rd birthday with no mention of any kind of him in the Soviet press.

Khrushchev presumably celebrated his birthday at the country house outside Moscow where he has lived in retirement since his ouster in October 1964. He seldom leaves there.

His last known appearance in Moscow was March 12 when he voted in a parliamentary election. A crowd of about 1,000 Russians gave him a friendly reception.

Caruthersville Devises Plan For Integration

CARUTHERSVILLE -- Facing a possible loss of more than $500,000 in federal aid, public school officials here are in the process of devising a plan for integration of the system.

The first step in the new plan was reached last week when the school board announced the sophomore, junior and senior classes will be totally integrated this fall.

The deicision came after discussions with representatives of the United States office of education. Federal officials were in Caruthersville because previous programs established by local authorities had not been acceptable.

In the fall of 1968 the ninth grade will become totally integrated and by the fall of 1970 the remaining lower grades as well. School authorities indicated this plan appears to be acceptable to Federal officials.

The deadline for federal applications was Saturday, but W. V. Hill, superintendant of schools, sought an extension of that deadline to get the applications in order and sent to Jefferson City.

SEMO Highways Are Shortchanged--Hearnes

POPLAR BLUFF -- Southeast Missouri has been shortchanged for too long in its efforts to get modern highways to Jefferson City and to St. Louis, Gov. Warren E. Hearnes said Friday as he discussed his toll roads proposition before the Southeast Missouri Press Association.

"I very seldom get married to a bill," the governor said, but I am to this one."

He characterized the opposition to toll road legislation as ridiculous and said Missouri is 16 years behind Oklahoma in construction of pay throughways.

"All the years I have been in politics, Missouri has been talking about a road from southeast Missouri into St. Louis and hasn't done it yet."

The press meeting ended at noon Saturday after the business session which followed an address by Rex Denman, advertising manager for Wetterau Foods, Inc. Speaker for the Diamond Jubilee banquet Friday night was Alvin McCoy, Pulitizer Prize winning reporter for the Kansas City Star and the newspaper's science editor.

Gov. Hearnes addressed newsmen and their wives at the opening luncheon.

Recalling the turnpike legislation had been introduced in 1953, the governor said if a turnpike had been built from St. Louis to Memphis, Tenn., then, it would have been better than to have to wait for the completion of I-55. His inference was that the toll road would long since have been paid for and traffic would be moving over the route.

Gov. Hearnes said the state needs a highway from Jefferson City to southeast Missouri and another that would extend from Little Rock, Ark., northward to intersect it, giving access in both directions.

Replying to criticism that the toll road should not be in the hands of the state highway commission as the toll road authority, the governor declared that the bonds could be sold cheaper by the commission than through a separate toll road authority.

Critics, he said, contend that gasoline tax money should not be used for the roads if revenues are insufficient to meet the cost.

"The road is as much a road as anyplace else in Missouri," the governor declared. "The law says it becomes a free road in our system."

He said he could not see what the argument was about.

Gov. Hearnes also commented on criticism of his plan for an airport to serve the Lake of the Ozarks.

One objection, he said, came from a Jefferson City newspaper which complained about the use of Highway Department crews to take core samplings at the site during the dull part of the construction season. But, he said, he didn't hear Jefferson City complain when the same crew was used to make core samplings on the site on which a major manufacturer later located."

A St. Louis newspaper, the opposition to building the runway, declaring it was wrong to take grounds from a state park, (Lake of the Ozarks State Park.)

This park, Gov. Heanres emphasized, has 16,000 acres in it, largely wooded and undeveloped. He asked how much land the building of an 8,000-foot landing strip took out of a 16,000 - acre undeveloped tract of Ozark land.

The possibilities open to Missouri through such a jet landing strip are huge and the results would outdo Kentucky Lake in its ramification, he said.

Gov. Hearnes said that soldiers have been proposed for use in building the field and that they would be drawn from a detachment at Fort Leonard Wood which is being trained to construct landing fields in Vietnam. Here, he stressed, was an opportunity for them to learn.

"But labor says 'no', you're keeping jobs from us," the governor went on. "They're cutting off their nose to spite their face."

He pointed out that the jobs labor would lose are a tiny part of the jobs that would be created, and observed if the field was contracted, labor had no assurance the contract would go to a union contractor.

Gov. Hearnes said he was pessimistic about the chances for the Lake of the Ozarks field and did not know what Washington would do about labor's protest. Funds from the Economic Development Administration are another "if," he said

Let Tenoran® kill the weeds in your young soybeans. In about 10 days, clean beans.

Tenoran kills the troublesome broadleaf weeds that come through most weed killers. And Tenoran can be applied early to soybeans—in their true leaf stage. You see your stand of beans before you kill the weeds. This makes Tenoran the best early postemergence weed-killer and the modern way to weed beans.

When weeds come into your beans, hit them before they're 2-inches high. Weeds do their worst damage then. Tenoran does its best job then. In about 10 days you'll have dead weeds and clean beans—a profitable combination. Call your dealer for Tenoran Herbicide.

As Strong As Death

By Brigadier Christine E. McMillan (R)

The basic truth of the Christian faith, oddly enough, is the one that most baffles the average Christian-- "Love one another."

Some argue that this refers to the Christian Community alone. Yet even if that were so -- which it is not--

"To live above with saints we love,
That will be glory.
To live below, with those we know,
That's another story!"

Another story indeed, as most us will confess. Are we to love everyone, our annoying neighbors, our most trying relatives, our oh-so-difficult bosses and work associates, with those who carp at us and criticize, the non-compatible, the non-friendly, the downright unfriendly?

Of course, it really depends on what you mean by love. If you are thinking in terms of that emotion shared by lovers, by parents and children, by dear friends, by those of kindred mind and soul, then perhaps we cannot love everyone.

It does not seem to me that as a man, as a human being, our Lord felt the same kind of love toward all who came into His life.

He loved Martha and Mary and Lazarus. These were His close friends. But He obviously did not love, humanly speaking, the scribes and the Pharisees, the buyers and sellers He whipped out of the Temple, nor the oppressors of the innocent, the weak and the helpless.

He could not have felt for them as He did for those near and dear to Him. But at the last He died for them, and asked that they might be forgiven.

This love which Christ asks unique and set apart that the early Christians really appropriated a Greek word to express it. Eros was the word for sexual love. Philia meant nice, kind, good-natured, tolerant love. The word those early Christians used was agape.

It is agape which makes ordinary men and women into heroes, martyrs and saints. It was agape which took Father Damien to the lepers on Molokai. It was agape that led Livingstone and Schweitzer to darkest Africa.

This special sort of love is a transforming power. It is known in the hearts of humble people who quietly live it, and whose actions speak louder than the words of those who have only words to give.

I knew a man who once had been a very difficult person, hard to understand, almost impossible to like. He had few friends but somehow, mysteriously, he changed.

He said to me years later, speaking of my father: "He made me believe that I was the sort of person he believed me to be, and because he recognized the best in me I strove to be that best."

A young woman worked for an extremely difficult boss. He seemed to be vindictive and cruel, uncontrolled sometimes in his angers and uncanceled dislikes. She came to hate him, and hate let to a desire to retaliate in ways which would have cost him his job. This brought her up short. "I am a Christian. . I cannot do this, or feel like this. . ."

She couldn't feel love for him, certainly, but she could remember him before God, feeling concern for his troubled mind and really wanting God to bring His peace to his tormented spirit.

Agape is to care with deep concern. It is to be willing to take infinite pains for another with no hope of response or reward. It is to forgive before they have repented. It is to give, and give, and not to count the cost.

"Love is gladdened by goodness, always eager to believe the best, always hopeful, always patient. Love never disappears. Love is as strong as death."

Julien Heads Youth Employment Council

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) -- Gov. Warren Hearnes Monday named ex-officio members of a state council on youth employment to help state agencies and individual employers in hiring young people during the school vacation this summer.

Herman Julien, director of the Division of Employment Security, was named chairman. Other members include:

Proctor N. Carter, director of welfare; Tom David, director of revenue; Dexter Davis, agriculture commissioner; M.J. Snider, chief engineer of the highway commission; Dr. L. M. Garner, acting director of public health; Dr. George A. Ulett, director of mental diseases; Col. E. I. Hockaday, Highway Patrol superintendent, and Hubert Wheeler, education commissioner.

Frederick Haug

Dr. Haug Named to New Post

EAU CLAIRE, Wis. -- Dr. Frederick E. Haug, associate professor of speech at Wisconsin State University - Eau Claire, has been named to the newly created post of associate dean of the school of Arts and Sciences in the University, according to announcement made today by President Leonard Haas. The associate dean will assist the dean of the school of arts and sciences, with particular responsibility for developing and supervising academic advising programs, both for students majoring and minoring in the departments of the school, and for those enrolled in pre-professional sequences of study. He will also maintain liaison with professional schools in medicine, architecture, law, engineering, and other specialized fields. Dr. Haug's duties as associate dean will commence Sept. 1.

He is the husband of the former Sally Webb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Webb of 402 Benton, Sikeston, Mo. Mrs. Haug is also a member of the faculty at Wisconsin State University-Eau Claire.

Dr. Haug brings to the new deanship a background of experience in administrative work as executive secretary of the Wisconsin High School Forensic association, a post he held with appointment as assistant professor of speech in the University of Wisconsin extension speech department from 1959 until joining the Wisconsin State - Eau Claire faculty in the fall of 1965. He is president of the Wisconsin Speech association.

Graduating from Eau Claire State university in 1953 with a bachelor of science degree, Dr. Haug earned the master of Sicence in speech at the University of Wisconsin in 1954 and the doctor of philosophy degree at Wisconsin in 1965. He is a member of the honorary education fraternity Phi Delta Kappa, of the honorary speech fraternity Kappa Delta Pi, and is advisor to Phi Sigma Epsilon. He is a member of the seven-person national advisory council of the National University Extension association on discussion and debate issures for high school students and is listed in the 1967-68 edition of Who's Who in American Education.

In debating budget appropriations, Congressmen notoriously guard their own projects dearly, but slice willingly away at the recommendations of their colleagues. This state of affairs reminds Arizona Congressman Morris K. Udall of this story: "Hanging his coat on a restaurant rack, a man sat down to dine. A thief seized his coat, put it on and began to run off down the street. The coat's owner, enlisting a nearby policeman, gave chase. The officer ordered the thief to halt; when he kept on running the coat - owner shouted, 'Shoot Him! Shoot-him -- in the pants!'"

Where did this shopping trip start?

Like so many of the most successful shopping expeditions hereabouts, this one started with a careful study of the advertising columns of this newspaper.

That way, the shopper got a quick, city-wide preview of who was offering what for sale . . . and for how much.

Thus, without waste motion or loss of time, she was able to make a bee-line for the stores that had what she wanted to buy at the prices she wanted to pay.

Advertising in this newspaper is a "two-way street." For the shopper, it's a time-saving short-cut to the best values in town. For the advertiser, it's an effective selling short-cut to his most responsive market.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: You have insulted a very important segment of American society, and we are a touchy group. I refer to the Crossword Puzzle Buffs of America.

What do you mean by saying the ability to work out a crossword in record time is no proof of intelligence or general knowledge. You make it sound like any idiot can work a crossword while walking in his sleep. And your description of the crossword buff, "sitting with a dictionary in his lap," indeed! Have you ever tried to sit with a 30-pound book in your lap? Well, be my guest.

Working crosswords is wonderful relaxation and at the same time it is a fine exercise in mental gymnastics. So why don't you be a nice girl and give us a seven word for "I'm sorry?" -- BUFFY

Dear Buffy: Do you mean: "A-P-O-L-O-G-Y" O. K. Am I forgiven?

Dear Ann Landers: As the owner of a small motel, I am issuing a complaint against the way you repeatedly refer to motels as hideouts for immoral sex escapades.

In a recent column you said, "When a man takes a girl to a motel room -- etc.." Why didn't you say, "When a man takes a girl to a hotel" or "to his apartment," or "for a ride in his car?"

We have rescued many stranded people who had automobile trouble. Frequently we provide a temporary home for out-of-town families who are unable to find a place to rent immediately. We have salvaged many shaky marriages by making housing available to any angry man or wife, so she could spend a night alone and cool off and think things over.

So, please, Ann Landers, don't use "motel" as a synonym for den of iniquity. Thank you. -- MIFFED

Dear Miffed: When a person writes "We went to a motel," I don't change it to read, "We went to a choir loft."

I am well aware that the majority of motel operators do everything they can to run a respectable inn. They don't want the two-hour customers. But when a person who writes to me says "We went to a motel" I print "motel."

Dear Ann Landers: After several years of marriage to a fine but dull executive, I fell madly in love with a married man. We agreed to divorce our mates and spend the rest of our lives together.

Unfortunately, my husband twisted things around and left me. He charged adultery.

My lover has now decided he cannot leave his family and the future looks bleak. I seem to be living the back street of his life. Suddenly he feels he must pay more attention to his wife for the sake of appearance. What should I do? Please give me your candid opinion. -- MONTREAL

Dear Montreal: Your husband didn't have to do much twisting, the way I read it. My candid opinion is that you ought to wipe the egg off your face and ask your husband to take you back. If he agrees, consider yourself lucky and devote the rest of your life to making him happy.

What is French kissing? Is it wrong? Who should set the necking limits -- the boy or the girl? Can a shotgun wedding succeed? Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Teen-age Sex -- Ten Ways To Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE
By Jack Strass L.L.D.

THE CASE OF THE DECREPIT DISSENTER

Agatha was so old she remembered when a bureau was a piece of furniture. Despite her age, however, and particularly despite her rheumatism, she did plenty of kicking when she read the form she had to sign in order to apply for Medicare. Applicants had to state, in response to a question, whether they were members of any group that was required to register under the Internal Security Act of 1950. This dealt with pro-communist organizations. And, if they were members, then Medicare benefits were to be denied them.

Wobbling on her bent legs and waving a cane under the nose of an official, Agatha insisted that she didn't like the question or the consequences of giving the wrong answer.

"It's unconstitutional," she cackled. "I can't be denied Medicare because I like to join clubs. Whether they be red, white or blue, or just pink it doesn't mean that I'd fall for what they stand for. In the final analysis, I'm as patriotic as Martha Washington."

Popping mad, Agatha attacked the validity of the question in court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit the "membership question" to remain in the Medicare application?

This is how the judge ruled: No! He held that being a member of pro-communist organization does not, in and of itself, establish a person's intent to commit a criminal act against the government. To attribute such an intent to a person would be guilt by association. And, concluded the judge, to deny a person Medicare benefits because of such membership would be to violate the First Amendment's right of freedom of speech, assembly and association.

Looking Back Over The Years

The Sikeston Natatorium has been put in first class condition for the spring opening. The pool was filled Wednesday of this week, and will be formally opened some time this month. The dressing rooms have been finished, the showers installed, a last coat of paint put on the building and a walk built from the street to the entrance. Mr. Chaney will have an instructor at the pool during most of the summer.

Once more Sikeston has an opportunity for a local hospital. We have two trained nurses, Miss Mary Ray, a graduate of Bowling Green, Ky., and Miss Daisy Barker, a graduate of Natchez, Miss. With these nurses to start with and the cooperation of the physicians of this and neighboring towns, Sikeston should back a hospital. Think of this proposition and be at the Commercial Club meeting Monday evening to talk the matter over.

The contract for the Wallace Applegate house has been let to George Gossmann of Charleston. The Laubis Architectural Co., executed the plans.

M. L. Reed, representative of the Koken Barber Supply Co., closed a deal with the Sanitary Barber Shop on New Madrid street Wednesday for new fixtures throughout the shop, which will be of marble and entirely sanitary in every way. The fixtures will be installed in about four weeks.

The high waters of Southeast Missouri took toll of two of our respected citizens Saturday afternoon when Alfred Inman and Robert Minner were drowned in the back waters, one mile south and one and a half miles east of Matthews. Mr. Inman lived within a few hundred yards of where he met his death while Bob Minner lived with his wife and four small children at McMullin, north of Sikeston. Inman was farming part of the C. F. McMullin Estate nearby and Bob Minner, as the McMullin land overseer was there to look out for corn and other interests of the estate.

The Prayer
From The Upper Room

"Be Faithful, till death, and I will give you the crown of life." (Revelation 2:10, NEB)

PRAYER: In the face of overwhelming odds, O Father, help us to spurn the side of evil and turn the tide so that love like Christ's may rule in the hearts of all mankind. Help us to pray, not merely with our lips but from the heart, the prayer Thy Son taught us, "Our Father who art in heaven .....Amen."

As a Bostonian, I am quite accustomed to books and movies being banned in our city. But the height of propriety came when I read that a local newspaper insists that its writers spell out Boston Redevelopment Authority because the initials make a word not mentioned in polite society.

Families Use Forecasts

Leonard F. Hand
Agricultural Meteorologist
University of Missouri Delta Center

PORTAGEVILLE--The Bootheel family unit is a major user of the weather forecast, sometimes without realizing it.

1. How are you going to dress the youngsters for their daily trip to school, mother? Check the weather forecast. Be particularly alert to expected changes in conditions before the kids are on their way home. Arrival of a fast-moving cold front can change a sunny mild morning into a rainy, windy, chilling afternoon for children dressed in light clothing. Afternoon thunderstorms may catch youngsters unprepared for a soacking rain.

2. Many housewifes still hang clothes outside to dry, either by desire or necessity. Drying conditions make the difference between a few hours on the line, or a rain soaked wash hanging limply through the night, or a trip to the laundromat. Cloudy days without good winds are not nearly as effective as bright sunshine. Forecasts give an estimate of per cent of sunshine you can expect each day.

4. Flowers are susceptible to damage by unfavorable temperatures. Some are more suited for shady areas and others require abundant sunlight. Frosts are especially damaging.

5. Whether it is mother's day off or a family outing, weather frequently determines if this is the day to plan a shopping trip to Memphis or St. Louis, to spend the day at the campground or lake, or to concentrate on housework at home.

Glowing Car Missing

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) - Kalamazoo police are looking for a car that glows in the dark.

It is an experimental 1963 Plymouth valued at $30,000 and taken from Western Michigan University's Industrial and Engineering Technology Building over the weekend.

It has a plastic top and a blue fluroescent body that will glow in the dark.

The vehicle was donated to Western Michigan by Chrysler Corp. It was taken by someone who broke into the building and took keys for the car from an office. The theft was discovered Sunday.

SUMMER BLESSING

MAY your summer be a rich and blessed one
With new awareness of the Father's good,
His beauty found in fragrant shadowed wood,
In winged creatures darting past the sun;
In salty breezes blowing from the sea,
In fields of flowing wheat and growing corn;
The wonder of a teetering calf, newborn,
Of berry blooms with bees for company.
How often treasures lavished by His hand
Lie unperceived or disregarded till
One pauses for a moment to be still,
To see afresh and then to understand
That, come what may, God truly loves, God lives;
Changeless, possessing all, He freely gives.

Space Team Appears Lost Carpenter's Bid to Rejoin

MANNED SPACE CENTER, Houston, Tex. (AP) — Astronaut M. Scott Carpenter gambled on the operating table six months ago, but he neither won nor lost. So, he says, he'll never fly in space again.

Carpenter, one of the original seven Mercury spacemen, had hoped the surgery would restore ability to fully rotate his left arm, broken just below the elbow in a 1964 motorcycle accident in Bermuda.

Doctors had told him that if he was to get back on space flying status the arm must be mended. However, the operation would be a delicate one and he stood a chance of losing even more movement in the arm.

"I took that chance," Carpenter said.

"But it didn't really do too much good. It didn't change my flight status any. I saw it wasn't improved much as soon as I got the cast off. It improved a little bit, but I think it's probably at a standstill now."

Navy Cmdr. Carpenter, who will be 42 in two weeks, said in an interview that apparently nothing more can be done to correct the situation.

Asked if this meant that he had given up all hope of flying again, he replied: "In a spacecraft, yes."

The problem is not serious enough to knock the former Navy test pilot off jet flight status.

Carpenter, a native of Boulder, Colo., became the second American to orbit the earth on May 24, 1962, by flying a three-orbit Mercury mission. In 1965, he took time off from the space program to participate as an aquanaut in the Sealab project, spending 30 days in a sunken laboratory on the bottom of the Pacific Ocean just off the California coast.

Carpenter said he would continue in the space program so long as "I've still got work to do and it still fascinates me."

Two others have been disqualified medically for space journeys. Navy Capt. Alan B. Shepard Jr. suffers from an inner ear problem known as labyrinthitis. Donald K. Slayton, a civilian, has a slight heart problem. Both hold administrative positions on the astronaut team.

HELP!

Everybody has heard about Zip Code.

But not everybody is using it. Perhaps some people think of it as just a favor to the post office—something to do if they happen to think of it.

But Zip Code is much, much more than that.

Zip helps our postal workers move mail the modern way. With Zip, they can sort it faster and deliver it by more direct routes. With Zip, they will use modern electronic machines that "read" Zip numbers and sort mail fifteen times faster than was possible before!

People who don't use Zip Code hold up the mail for themselves and for everyone else.

So use Zip on every mailing address. Use it on your return address, too. When in doubt about a Zip Code, you can call your post office or look it up in their Zip Code Directory.

And if someone writes you and doesn't use Zip Code —tell him. For us. We need all the help we can get.

HOW ZIP CODE WORKS

Suppose the Zip Code is 60635. The "6" says it goes to the Midwest. The "06" narrows it down to Chicago. The last two digits—"35"—pinpoint the local post office. This eliminates many handling procedures. The letter is sorted faster, and sent more directly to its destination.

Today In U. S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Tuesday, April 18, the 108th day of 1967. There are 257 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1775, Paul Revere made his famous ride to warn the American colonists of the approach of British troops from Boston.

On this date:

In 1847, Gen. Winfield Scott captured Cerro Gordo Hill, the first point of resistance in his march on Mexico City.

In 1906, the great San Francisco earthquake and fire occurred.

In 1942, 16 overloaded B25s took off from the deck of the carrier Hornet. Led by Lt. Gen. James Doolittle, they attacked Tokyo and other Japanese cities in the first effort to bring the war to the Japanese homeland.

In 1946, the League of Nations came to an official end.

Ten years ago — President Dwight Eisenhower reduced his budget appropriations request to Congress by $1.342 billion.

Five years ago — The American delegation at the 17-nation disarmament conference in Geneva submitted for consideration a three-stage program to achieve general disarmament over a period of several years.

One year ago — Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., suggested that Japan or Burma take the lead in bringing about Vietnam peace negotiations which would include the United States, Red China, North Vietnam and South Vietnam.

souri expects her University to do research and service in the direct betterment of the social and economic life of the state."

"May I express my fondest hope that in unison we may carry this fine University forward to its rightful destiny.

President Weaver spoke at formal ceremonies at Brewer Field House following an inaugural procession in which participated hundreds of educational leaders in academic robes, including residents of more than 60 major educational institutions. The day-long program also included a luncheon at which Gov. Warren E. Hearnes spoke and a reception for delegates and guests.

The governor outlined the "many-faceted" aspects of the institution's research programs, and quoted a national magazine as describing the activities at M. U. as "Missouri's upward reach."

"I like to think that the 'upward reach' of this university is inseparable from the aspirations and goals of our state."

Dr. Weaver was on the faculties of six mid-western schools before becoming president of the University last September upon retirement after an 11-year tenure by President Elmer Ellis.

cycles. City Attorney Paul McGee was instructed to check into the ordinance to see if it covers motorcycles. The council agreed that motorcycles should have stickers.

Street pavement repair for South Park lane from the L and M store to Elder Manufacturing Company and for Grant street from Walnut past the high school to the city limits was discussed. Cost of repairs is about $25,880. The street and alley committee is to study the matter and report at the next meeting.

Bids for $250,000 in industrial bonds were opened at 2 p.m. today. The bids are for construction of a new International Hat Company plant. The bond issue was passed Jan. 31.

Mayor Willis Conner read a letter of resignation from Marvin E. Jones from the library board and the city planning commission. Jones has resigned to accept a position on the Missouri Public Service Commission at Jefferson City. Bud Davis was appointed to replace Jones on the library board and planning commission.

Howard Hill was reappointed to a four-year term on the housing authority board, Dr. E. G. Bailey Jr., was reappointed to the airport board.

Mayor Conner reported that the city had a $4,000 certificate of time deposit with Dexter National bank which is due April 24. The council voted to renew the certificate for one year. The certificate is for factory rent and draws 5 per cent interest.

The annual spring cleanup campaign will be held May 15-16 in ward 1, May 17-18 in ward 2 and May 19 and 21 in ward 3.

Mayor Conner reported that a bed, hoist and sides were installed on a truck purchased by the city. Total cost of the improvements was $907.

A motion was approved to purchase a wrought iron overhead entrance to the city cemetery for $450. The council also approved a bill for $225 submitted by City Attorney Paul McGee for legal fees and preparation of the swimming pool and park improvement bonds.

A resolution was passed to post 25 mile-per-hour speed limit signs on Clement and Nelson streets in the Nelson addition. Residents had complained that motorcyclists were racing on these streets.

It was not until six years later in the summer of 1966 that they decided to try again.

Scott County Prosecuting Attorney Fielding Potashnick was asked to find out if they were still an incorporated town or if they would have to start all over again. Attorney General Norman Anderson ruled the town incorporated.

The matter rested there until March 30 when the surviving members of the original board called a town meeting and re - organized. The survivors of the first board, Jefferson, Cain, Moore and Hampton, were sworn in. They elected Cain chairman pro tem and C. D. Pugh clerk. The board passed an ordinance calling for the special election.

The two candidates receiving the highest number of votes will serve until April 1969. The three candidates receiving the next highest number of votes will serve until the general election in April of 1968.

The people and board have expressed a desire to improve their town.

The community is eligible to adopt a tax, not to exceed 50 cents per $100 property valuation. Two electric utilities serve the town the Scott-New-Madrid Mississippi Cooperative Association and the Missouri Utilities. Neither utility has paid any franchise taxes. As an incorporated town Haywood City should receive its portion of the state gasoline tax.

Residents say they are going to explore the possibilities of a federal government loan or grant to finance improvements in addition to relying on tax money.

April 28 Pool Bid Deadline

DEXTER - The deadline for submitting bids for construction of the $100,000 swimming pool is April 28, it was announced at the city council meeting Monday night.

The bids will be opened at 7 p.m. at the civic center.

Last month the council, upon the recommendation of the pool committee, voted to contest the wage and hour schedule suggested by the state for construction of the pool, charging it was too high.

The revised schedule lists electricians wages at $3.50 an hour. The previous schedule was $5.31 an hour. For the common laborer the previous schedule of $2.95 an hour was reduced to $2.625 and the cement worker from $3.85 to $3 an hour.

Wage scales for the carpenter, $3.50, and plumber, $4.91, remained the same in the new schedule.

Dowdy recommended that the council accept the new schedule, which was adopted.

The pool is being built with $50,000 in matching federal funds. A $75,000 bond issue was passed Nov. 15, with the additional $25,000 to be used for park improvements. The new pool will be located in Airport park on the east side of the city.

It was reported to the council that residents have tried to purchase city stickers without having paid city personal taxes. Ordinance requires that the taxes must be paid before the city sticker can be purchased. The council approved a motion to let the ordinance remain the same and gave police the authority to arrest any resident without a city sticker.

The council also discussed the need for motorcycles to display city stickers. A check of other cities showed that Sikeston charges $2 and Poplar Bluff $5 for city stickers for motor-

Turnpike Bill Eyed

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- The House today began arguing the merits of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' plans for building toll roads, but almost immediately became enmeshed in a web of conflicting amendments.

Basically, the bill would set up a toll road authority composed of the State Highway Commission and the governor. Revenue bonds would be used to build and operate the turnpikes with the tolls to pay off the bonds.

Senate sponsors were skeptical about the bill as it passed there and agreed it should be tightened in the House.

Two amendments were approved by the House Roads and Highways Committee but when the bill reached the House today new versions of restrictive amendments were offered.

If the bill is substantially changed by some of the amendments the whole issue is almost sure to be forced into a House-Senate conference.

Tornado Alert Siren System in Service

ST. LOUIS AP -- A tornado alert system using air raid sirens was put into effect Monday in St. Louis and St. Louis County.

Frank Murphy, civil defense director, said the tornado alert signal will be a steady, three-to - five - minute blast on the 178 sirens in the city and county.

There were four persons admitted to the Missouri Delta hospital emergency room Monday, treated for minor injuries to leg and shoulder and flash burns on the eyes.

Gerald Yeargain, stepped out of door and turned ankle; Jerry Humes, flash burns in eyes; James Crane Jr., Charleston, fell on chair and injured right shoulder; Brad Tanner, injured knee in fall on street.

Stir in Haywood City

HAYWOOD CITY -- This slumbering Scott county town is coming to life.

Until recently even its status as an incorporated town was in doubt.

The town never has collected any taxes.

The 500 to 600 inhabitants will make their first trip to the polls April 25 to elect five town trustees.

It took an affirmative ruling from the state attorney general's office before its residents knew whether they were an incorporated town.

Haywood City, or The Sands as some refer to it, is located three miles west of Blodgett in the center of the county. Its Negro inhabitants scratch out a living as farm laborers, day workers or at small factories, or anywhere else they can get a job.

They have no paved streets, no street lights, no water or sewer systems, no sidewalks.

But they are an incorporated town, and have been since 1960 when citizen's petitioned the Scott County Court to incorporate. Their request was granted and a temporary board was appointed consisting of Henry Jefferson, Elza Cain, Bryant Moore, Tom Hampton and Afert Godbolt.

The new board met after the charter was granted but dissident elements so disrupted the meeting that another one

COLUMBIA -- Dr. John C. Weaver, speaking as the 14th president of the 128-year old University of Missouri, said he viewed his formal inauguration as president today as a "moment for reorientation. rededication, of inauguration for a new era of opportunity and development" for the university.

"This is not an occasion to be centered on an individual," he disclaimed.

"Perhaps it is not so much at vague institutional aspirations that we should look as at the more explicit expectations which . . .(we). . .have for the University in the days ahead."

In his talk, Dr. Weaver spoke directly to the faculty, the students, and to citizens of Missouri on his philosophy of education.

To the faculty, Dr. Weaver pointed out:

"Both relevance and responsibility in education today demand teaching techniques and course and curricular objectives which prepare young people to face a life of fast moving and accelerating change.

"There is one further aspiration that I would hope to find emergent in this faculty. Let us strive for excellence, but excellence for its own sake and of our own consensus and definition. Let one of our prideful expectations be that the University faculty shall build new levels of scholarly accomplishment on each of its campuses, and that accomplishment shall not bear the label of imitation, but rather the imprint of distinction wrought in a mold of our own unique design.

"We must not only lead young people to a competence to handle today, but we have a desperate need for intellectual radar capable of sensing enough of what lies ahead to be able to refill the rightful expectation of youth that they will be handed an effective 'hot line to tomorrow.'

"It is hard to argue against the claim that in the intellectual arena of our time it is in science 'where the action is.' The work of science has become well - directed, dead serious and preoccupying.

To the student, Dr. Weaver said:

"No human institution has more reason than an educational institution to deny or stoutly resist any philosophy which would submerge the paramount importance of the individual. Knowledge can only be held and ultimate wisdom can only come to individual minds.

"With students of the four campuses of this University I would urge as my most fundamental expectation that though already large and though necessarily growing larger ways can be found to make education a warmly human experience for individual people, one by one."

"There is a third great audience of expectation that both surrounds and joins us here this morning -- the people of Missouri and their elected and appointed representatives, Dr. Weaver continued.

"On many fronts the expectations of this audience are clear enough. Missouri presumes that her state university will provide high quality, low cost undergraduate education to good students in all of the basic fields of learning.

April 28 Pool Bid Deadline

DEXTER - The deadline for submitting bids for construction of the $100,000 swimming pool is April 28, it was announced at the city council meeting Monday night.

The bids will be opened at 7 p.m. at the civic center.

Last month the council, upon the recommendation of the pool committee, voted to contest the wage and hour schedule suggested by the state for construction of the pool, charging it was too high.

The revised schedule lists electricians wages at $3.50 an hour. The previous schedule was $5.31 an hour. For the common laborer the previous schedule of $2.95 an hour was reduced to $2.625 and the cement worker from $3.85 to $3 an hour.

Wage scales for the carpenter, $3.50, and plumber, $4.91, remained the same in the new schedule.

Dowdy recommended that the council accept the new schedule, which was adopted.

The pool is being built with $50,000 in matching federal funds. A $75,000 bond issue was passed Nov. 15, with the additional $25,000 to be used for park improvements. The new pool will be located in Airport park on the east side of the city.

It was reported to the council that residents have tried to purchase city stickers without having paid city personal taxes. Ordinance requires that the taxes must be paid before the city sticker can be purchased. The council approved a motion to let the ordinance remain the same and gave police the authority to arrest any resident without a city sticker.

The council also discussed the need for motorcycles to display city stickers. A check of other cities showed that Sikeston charges $2 and Poplar Bluff $5 for city stickers for motor-

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

It is unfortunate that the United States doesn't have strong governors on both coasts.

If it did teachers in the Bronx might not be living in terror.

More than half of the teachers in a junior high school there refused to return to the classroom because school officials would not curb rowdyism.

The teachers complained about carrying heavy work loads while they were fair game in the hallways for young toughs, who feel assured that they won't be punished if they beat, maim or knife a teacher.

What the teachers sought reasonably enough and what they didn't get was a commitment from the school superintendent that future trouble-makers would be suspended.

Instead the spineless superintendent offered to study the problem. A study always is the easiest way to do nothing. It is a despicable, pussy-footing tactic.

Teachers considered a demand for combat pay. This isn't far fetched. Teaching is a hazardous profession in corrupt New York City, so designated by the city council. The council has asked the state legislature to extend disability benefits to teachers.

Just how New York City expects to recruit teachers let alone keep the ones on the job is difficult to understand.

What New York needs is a do-something, no-nonsense governor like Ronald Reagan in California rather than a do-nothing governor like Nelson Rockefeller, who doesn't want to lose the ruffian vote or any other vote.

It would help, too, if New York Mayor John Lindsey had the courage of any convictions which may hold about enforcing the law and restoring a semblance of safety to what he has chosen to call the "fun" city.

NEW 'TECHNIQUES' SINGS THE MESSAGE

Be not disappointed if, picking up the latest GPO Document that is out, you cannot find escapades containing rocket-firing motorcycles or Aston-Martins dripping with keen gadgets.

The document, "Techniques of Soviet Propaganda", is as good a spy thriller as is on the market because it's as true as it is well-written. There are plenty of devious plots and machiavellian machinations to keep you reading on, more than chilled by the realization that Soviet propaganda is fueling the communist conspiracy with finesse that makes the clever Goldfinger look like Mr. Butterthumb.

The document is crammed with vital information so deftly and delightfully stated it will steal the reader's time to the point of grand larceny - only he'll never know whether the good guys will win or not.

"Techniques" is the completely rewritten and updated version of a 1960 predecessor. Thanks to the talented and authoritative Suzanne Labin and the word-wizardry of Lee J. Adamson (who collaborated with Miss Labin on the no nonsense book, "Vietnam: An Eyewitness Account"), perhaps othe GPO documents may soon adopt this new, fresh approach to the care and feeding of more interesting GPO documents. Not that the others are dull, this one sings.

This Labin-Adamson work is filled with factual gems, the like of which would do justice to the most imaginative fiction. It's all real - so real that those who read it will reach a new dimension in understanding the communist mind and how it goes about trying to win converts.

One passage from "Techniques" is enough to convince. In the section on communist infiltration of the press, the authors write:

"The confession of Aleksandr Kaznacheyev penetrates...further into the dark abyss of press infiltration. Kaznacheyev was a young attache of the Soviet Embassy in Rangoon, capital of Burma, who chose liberty in 1959. As a typical professional product of communist conspiratorial training, he had attended the specialized schools of Moscow for ten years... He studied psychology, languages, the art of poisonous sophisms, photograhphy, printing, bridge, sports, the use of a silenced pistol, and guerilla warfare . . .

"His work consisted of processing articles received on microfilm from Moscow, drafted in their entirety by Russian propaganda agencies. Picking them up in the Embassy cellar, he translated them into Burmese or English, embellished with local color, and placed them in the large Rangoon newspapers, Newspaper of the People, New Light, and the English-language Mandalay Ludu, over the signatures of underground Burmese on the newspaper staffs . . . Once published, Kaznacheyev forwarded clippings to Tass News Agency, which made a great deal of noise about them, stressing the point they were genuine products of Burmese political opinion."

Slick, smooth, and absolute proof that those who apologize for communist behavior ought to hock their Phi Beta Kappa Keys to pay for a trip to the head shrinker's.

But there is more. Labin and Adamson reveal that Kaznacheyev called on his training as a forger and whomped up a masterpiece in the form of a letter attributed to U.S. Admiral Frost. The Russian had Frost saying that the U.S. would support anticommunism in the Sumatran insurrection against President Sukarno of Indonesia. It was a most delicate maneuver because it automatically branded Indonesian anticommunists as tools of Washington. The Admiral did protest to a salty degree, but suspicion had been planted sufficiently to make protest futile. Kaznacheyev admitted the forgery three years later.

Typical of the document's lean sentences that positively sprint is this one alluding to the intellectual laziness in the free world - thanks to Moscow's monumental ability to make its listeners believe all that isn't so:

" . . Western leaders . . .believe that the Soviets regard a conference, a treaty, and a minister as a conference, a treaty, and a minister, whereas the Kremlin has actually made of them a trap, a rag, and a menial respectively.

And:

"We crush the taxpayers to forge a steel breastplate with which to face the Kremlin on the battlefield, while in the struggle for minds we furnish television time to communist-serving intellectuals whose wiles paralyze resistance to the Kremlin."

There's a mountain of meaning there, indeed. It has the sort of mind-joggling, sensible exhortation that does justice to the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee that was its originator, the Congress, and the authors who did such a masterful job of communicating a vital need of our time. It ought to be bought by the hundreds and circulated among the millions of Americans who couldn't care less about Soviet propaganda, even as they are being brainwashed by the Red artisans of distortion, lie and infiltration.

SPENDING OR SAVING?

Poor Richard is almost a villain in the Great Society. In a consumer-oriented economy, a penny saved is not necessarily a penny earned. All things being normal, any banker would rather loan money than borrow it. Frugality does not make the mare go.

These simple if slightly disturbing truths explain in part why government economists have been worrying in recent months. The American consumer has not been behaving according to form. With plenty of money to spend, he has been going to the bank instead of the store.

The latest data are, however, reassuring. Retail store sales sprinted to a record in March after a string of sluggish months. At a seasonably adjusted $26,474,000,000, March sales were up 4 per cent from the year-earlier level.

Retail sales had been almost flat since first crossing the $25-billion mark in March 1966. In February they reached $25,636,000,000 but still were disappointing to economic soothsayers.

Consumer credit and consumer purchasing are closely related. Consumer credit continued to grow in 1966, but at a sharply reduced rate. As the Federal Reserve Bulletin puts it: "To a large extent the pattern of credit use has paralleled developments in consumption expenditures. Sluggishness in spending for automobiles and other durable goods, for example, has been translated into reduced demands for credit. Moreover, the timing of changes in spending and credit has been broadly similar."

When people stop buying, retail merchants start reducing inventories. That means they stop ordering from manufacturers. Hit doubly, in a sense, the manufacturers cut back production. Eventually workers have to be laid off. And to complete a most unattractive circle, more people of necessity stop buying. That's the way some recessions start.

Consumers spent close to $5 billion less in the last three months of 1966 than they had in the previous quarter. At the same time their savings rate jumped one percentage point to 5.9 per cent of disposable income. As recently as March 20, Impact, a business letter circulated by banks and other financial institutions had warned: "At worst the economy could be in a recession and in desperate need of strong fiscal action."

Savings and loan associations across the nation experienced a first quarter of 1967 savings gain of $2.1 billion. This was a rise of 169 per cent over the first three months of 1966, according to the U.S. Savings and Loan League.

The "savings - no spending" trend was influenced by a very early Easter. Bad weather, including extreme cold in many parts of the country, certainly didn't help retailers. The biggest slump, aside from the already mentioned sluggishness in the automobile market, was in refrigerators, stoves, and other heavy appliances. Women's apparel orders were off because of a kind of freakish switch in fashion tastes.

Now there is new hope on New York's Seventh Avenue. Spring-summer re-orders are coming in from stores at a stronger rate. Early fall bookings appear promising. It's too early to tell, but business in general may get better.

Motorists were warned today by Colonel E. I. (Mike) Hockaday, Superintendent of the Missouri State Highway Patrol, against any false security which overtakes many drivers with the better weather conditions of spring.

"Last year our spring traffic deaths soared from 108 in March, to 118 in April and 130 in May. The 1966 record was the highest in the State's history, 1,379 fatalities. Such a prospect, if repeated, is enough to take the joy out of driving in the warm months ahead."

The Patrol Superintendent pointed out some of the driving hazards associated with this time of the year and showed how motorists can safely meet them: Respect and expect sudden spring rain showers. Reduce your speed and increase your following distance when it rains; Concentrate on your driving. Don't let the beautiful scenery distract you from your main job of driving; Children are out in great number, watch for them as you drive through residential areas and near playgrounds; Drivers are also out in great numbers this time of the year. Even secondary roads, at times, may be crowded. Keep alert to the road situation ahead of you and be prepared for anything; And, winter driving is often hard on a vehicle's vital safety parts. Have your vehicle checked before you take that spring vacation.

"This spring we will again face the same seasonal hazards of increased traffic, higher traffic speeds, sudden rain showers and the other dangers connected with this time of the year," the Colonel continued. "I urge you, therefore, to show more alertness, more caution and more courtesy as you travel the highways.

"As drivers and pedestrians, make this the spring of your lifetime, not the last springtime of your life," he concluded.

PAUL'S RIDE

Paul Revere's horse galloped down the country roads. The life of the colonies depended on his warning the people that the British were coming. He approached a farmhouse.

"Is your husband at home?" he called to the woman feeding chickens in the yard.

"He's back in the barn, Paul, she answered.

"Tell him to get his musket and go to the village square. The Redcoats are coming!"

The exchange of words had taken but an instant; Revere's horse had not broken its stride. The famous patriot thundered off toward the next farm.

"Is your husband at home?" Revere called to the woman in the doorway of the next farmhouse he approached.

"He's asleep in his room, Paul," she said.

"Tell him to get on his clothes," Revere cried, "The Minute Men are meeting at the village square. The British are coming!"

Horse and rider galloped on to still another home.

"Is your husband at home?" he called to the handsome woman who leaned out the window.

"He's gone to New Amsterdam and won't be back 'til Sunday," she said.

DO YOU WORRY ABOUT YOUR SPEECH?

A man by the name of Paul J. Meyer heads a sales stimulation organization in Texas and has been eminently successful. Early in his sales life he perceived that he needed instruction in speech - making which would also improve his selling talk. So in time he invested more than $5000 in such improvement courses.

Maybe you've heard him make a speech. You'd never know that he had ever made a speech before. It is an ordeal to listen to him. He hems and haws, he gropes for words, he seems to be in mortal agony trying to explain his simple proposition.

But what is the audience doing? It's trying to help him make the speech. When he reaches for a word you reach for it, too. Instead of distress you feel sympathy for the man.

That is exactly what he wants. He does it deliberately -- even scientifically. He attains that all important empathy almost immediately.

"You are at my level," he explained.

CINDY AND HER PRINCE CHAP

The trouble with Britons is, they don't appreciate literary genius, modern style. As proof, consider the sad tale of Dennis Potter, a playwright by trade. Or so it is alleged.

With a slight assist from the Brothers Grimm, Potter puttered around and came up with a tale about a girl named Cinderalla. This he entitled "Almost Cinderella." For reasons that may never be explained, this bonbon was bought by someone at the British Broadcasting Corporation, and that genius and/or others decided it was a perfect offering for Christmas Day. But then there was a surprising switch, and the BBC announced that it was not either going to present Playwright Potter's potion.

Why? Well, that you'll have to figure out for yourself.

Just about everyone knows the story of Cinderella and how the fairy godmother of this sweet young thing not only got her to Prince Charming's ball but made her the stellar attraction at the Prince's wedding. A nice, wholesome story but strictly for squares. So Potter putted it around a bit and came up with a version suitable for Britain's far-out set, including the Mods and the Rockers.

The potterized version dressed Cindy in a miniskirt and a sneer. Not only was Cindy contemptuous of her nasty Aunty and her disagreeable cousins, she had no use for anybody. Which proves that blood is thicker than water.

Befitting such a beastly female, Potter gave her an appropriate soul-mate in a Potterized Prince Charming. You could call him a bit of a nut, and still be charitable. As Potter put it: "Prince Charming comes out as a comewhat unstable character who has sexual problems because he can't find satisfaction with other girls."

Other girls?

Having created such a delightful couple, Potter provided an appropriate story. To sum it up, the Prince strangled his new girl friend. At midnight. And since this tidbit was scheduled for Christmas broadcast, that would have been about the time the shepherds saw the Star.

We're glad that someone at the BBC had sense enough to strangle this weird one - before midnight. Now the question is: What network will buy it for the American audience?

NEW OUTBREAK AT BERKELEY

The latest fantastic outburst on the campus of the University of California at Berkeley provides unmistakable proof of the folly of trying to appease irresponsible agitators.

A policy of appeasement has been followed by University of California authorities ever since the "student rebellion" two years ago. This policy is similar both in its presuppositions and its practice to the foreign policy of appeasement toward the external communist foe so long practiced by the State Department.

Mass law - breaking by students at a university simply cannot be tolerated if real education, which is the university's sole proper business, is to continue. If it is tolerated, then education gradually ceases to be offered or accepted.

Since the riots two years ago, many of the best and most responsible teachers and students have left Berkeley, not to return. Classes have been bodily taken over by agitators. Faculty members in sympathy with the rioters have spent many class hours in "discussion" of the riots and their causes, instead of teaching their subjects.

The latest outbreak was triggered by the mere appearance of a man wearing the uniform of the United States Navy at a table provided for him by university authorities in the Student Union Building. One wonders whether he would have escaped unharmed if he had also had the temerity to bring with him an American Flag.

The minority of mentally disturbed misfits who lead and inspire these "demonstrations" should be curbed. The taxpaying public which provides the funds for state universities has every right to demand that they guarantee a suitable atmosphere for real education. HLH.

NEW YORK (AP) — Curbstone comments by a sidewalk Socrates:

What would happen if actress Jayne Mansfield were given an injection from the brain of the late mathematician, Dr. Albert Einstein?

Might it help make her figure better?

This and many another conjecture has been raised by two scientific experiments which indicate that specific information can be transmitted from one creature to another by brain extract injections.

The experiments at Baylor University's College of Medicine and Queens College of the city of New York were done on mice.

The problem for the mice was to learn their way out of a maze. Evidence was found that beginning mice solved the problem quicker when given injections of brain extract from other mice who had earlier learned the best way out of the maze.

Naturally, if this be true on a broad scale, it is too good a technique to limit to mice. If it helps them get out of a maze, why can't it also help people solve the problems of the human rat race?

Parents by the thousands will drag their churlish, reluctant children to scientific laboratories with such requests as:

"I want my son, Irving to be a doctor. What do you charge for three injections of medical brains? better yet, make him a specialist. How much for 10 injections?"

"My daughter I would like to see in Radcliffe. Her brains seem okay in English and gymanisum, but she's terribly weak in Ancient History brains, Greek brains, and Social Science brains. Can she get all the injections she needs today, or do you want her to come back tomorrow also?"

"Our little boy is fine in nursery school in everything but group attitude. His teacher says he is far too aggressive. Would you recommend perhaps an injection of mice brains to help give him a meeker personality?"

There are no end to the possibilities, of course.

A husband with a wife chronically unable to balance her bank account could well threaten her with divorce if she refused to be injected with brain extract from an obliging accountant.

A wife with a husband unable to earn her a decent living might want to mortgage their small home to raise funds to inject him with extract of a millionaire's brain.

There is also the probability that criminal syndicates would get into the act. They could start selling brain extracts of famous people on the black market, and secretly water them down with brain extract taken from Bowery bums and broken- down horse players, eager to make a fast buck.

Aside from the threat of chicanery involved in creating a mass brain extract market to help everyone achieve instant wisdom, there is a practical limitation: There aren't that many brains around. And most of the people with good brains aren't about to dilute them for the benefit of others. They choose to keep them for their own use.

As Euclid said long ago, "There is no royal road to learning."

Despite what science may do with mice, people will have to go on learning with the brains they were born with.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The petition of the four ex - employees of Sen. Tom Dodd, D-Conn., to reopen the Dodd probe because of insufficient investigation presents an important challenge to the senate. It highlights what many senators do not seem to realize, that congressional prestige is at an all - time low and they need to clean house vigorously to protect the reputation of the most important legislative body in the world.

The staff members' letter lists careful, sobering charges against one of the 100 highest lawmakers of the United States and cannot be ignored. Members of the Senate Ethics Committee have already brushed it off, but the public will not.

Reason given by ethics committee members for not further investigating the staff members' charges is that they are based on stolen documents. This is beside the point. For the four staff members can testify of their own knowledge regarding most of the transactions which they listed in their damning letter.

Furthermore, no less than the former Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach has stated that the so - called "stolen" documents are admissible as evidence.

So there must be other reasons for the reluctance of the Ethics committee to probe these incriminating charges.

One obvious reason is the reluctance of senators to investigate another senator. This was all too evident at the start of the Dodd case, when the ethics committee did not move until Dodd himself requested an investigation.

Long before this, however, many senators had known that their colleague from Connecticut was not on the up and up. You cannot serve nine or ten years with another man in a body of only 100 without forming some definite ideas regarding his ethical conduct.

That was why Sen. William Fulbright, D-Ark., once spoke out on the senate floor criticising Dodd for having once been a foreign agent. Fulbright, D-Ark., once spoke out on the senate floor criticising Dodd for having once been a foreign agent. Fulbright knew, as did some others, that Dodd had received a fee of $50,000 from the Guatemalan government just after he left the House of Representatives. One of his last acts while in the house was to get $15 million of foreign aid voted for Guatemala.

When Sen. Fulbright referred to this in the senate floor, however, his remarks were stricken from the record.

Sen. Dirksen, R-Ill., also knew that Dodd had trouble carrying his liquor, and at one time rebuked him on the senate floor.

It was also evident from Dodd's absentee record that something was wrong. Almost no other senator was absent so much from vital committee work. Obviously he was engaged in other things.

Yet no senator moved to investigate Dodd. Only after this column had published a long series of itemized episodes showing amazing connections with Gen. Julius Klein, a paid agent, and various other conflicts, did some of the more courageous senators -- Wayne Morse, Ore., and Steve Young, Ohio, Democrats; with John Williams, Del., and Jack Miller, Iowa, Republicans, diplomatically prod the ethics committee regarding its investigation.

Another reason why the ethics committee may be loath to probe further into the unprobed charges of Dodd's staff members is that Dodd's law practice is involved, and at least three senators have law practices which sometimes get mixed up with legislation.

The electorate, however, is inclined to take a dim view of senatorial law practices. In 1958, Sen. John Bricker of Ohio, one - time GOP nominee for vice president, was shown to have backed legislation favorable to the Pennsylvania railroad while his lawn firm in Columbus accepted legal fees from the Pennsylvania.

Sen. Steve Young, using this ammunition, defeated Bricker.

LOWER ETHICAL STANDARDS

What many senators don't realize is that the ethical standards of congress have dropped drastically today compared with the old days.

Toward the end of the Coolidge administration, William P. Vare, Republican boss of Pennsylvania, staged a primary campaign against George Wharton Pepper in which Vare spent around $700,000. The senate rose up in its wrath and refused to seat Vare on the ground that he had bought his election.

At about the same time, Sen. Frank Smith spent $125,000 in the Illinois primary, contributed by utilities magnate Sam Insull. The senate also refused to seat him.

During this same period, Truman Newberry, Republican, spent a fortune to defeat Henry Ford in the Michigan Senate race. As the senate investigated the expenditure, Newberry resigned.

Today, it's reported that Republicans Ronald Reagan in California and Nelson Rockefeller in New York spent three to seven million on their campaigns for governor. The electorate didn't lift an eyebrow.

This is one reason why Sen. Russell Long's proposed fund-raising through a $1 income tax check-off had potentials. You shouldn't have to be a millionaire or get in hock to big campaign contributors to run for high office.

In 1925, Sen. Hiram Bingham, powerful Connecticut Republican, permitted Charles L. Eyanson, a representative of the Connecticut Manufacturers Association, to sit in an executive session of the Senate Finance Committee while the Smoot - Hawley Tariff Act was being written. For this Bingham was officially censured.

The ethics of congress have dropped a long way from that day. And it will require drastic action by both the senate and the house to get them back to a high level again.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

It is unfortunate that the United States doesn't have strong governors on both coasts.

If it did teachers in the Bronx might not be living in terror.

More than half of the teachers in a junior high school there refused to return to the classroom because school officials would not curb rowdyism.

The teachers complained about carrying heavy work loads while they were fair game in the hallways for young toughs, who feel assured that they won't be punished if they beat, maim or knife a teacher.

What the teachers sought reasonably enough and what they didn't get was a commitment from the school superintendent that future trouble-makers would be suspended.

Instead the spineless superintendent offered to study the problem. A study always is the easiest way to do nothing. It is a despicable, pussy-footing tactic.

Teachers considered a demand for combat pay. This isn't far fetched. Teaching is a hazardous profession in corrupt New York City, so designated by the city council. The council has asked the state legislature to extend disability benefits to teachers.

Just how New York City expects to recruit teachers let alone keep the ones on the job is difficult to understand.

What New York needs is a do-something, no-nonsense governor like Ronald Reagan in California rather than a do-nothing governor like Nelson Rockefeller, who doesn't want to lose the ruffian vote or any other vote.

It would help, too, if New York Mayor John Lindsey had the courage of any convictions which may hold about enforcing the law and restoring a semblance of safety to what he has chosen to call the "fun" city.

Motorists were warned today by Colonel E. I. (Mike) Hockaday, Superintendent of the Missouri State Highway Patrol, against any false security which overtakes many drivers with the better weather conditions of spring.

"Last year our spring traffic deaths soared from 108 in March, to 118 in April and 130 in May. The 1966 record was the highest in the State's history, 1,379 fatalities. Such a prospect, if repeated, is enough to take the joy out of driving in the warm months ahead."

The Patrol Superintendent pointed out some of the driving hazards associated with this time of the year and showed how motorists can safely meet them: Respect and expect sudden spring rain showers. Reduce your speed and increase your following distance when it rains; Concentrate on your driving. Don't let the beautiful scenery distract you from your main job of driving; Children are out in great number, watch for them as you drive through residential areas and near playgrounds; Drivers are also out in great numbers this time of the year. Even secondary roads, at times, may be crowded. Keep alert to the road situation ahead of you and be prepared for anything; And, winter driving is often hard on a vehicle's vital safety parts. Have your vehicle checked before you take that spring vacation.

"This spring we will again face the same seasonal hazards of increased traffic, higher traffic speeds, sudden rain showers and the other dangers connected with this time of the year," the Colonel continued. "I urge you, therefore, to show more alertness, more caution and more courtesy as you travel the highways.

"As drivers and pedestrians, make this the spring of your lifetime, not the last springtime of your life," he concluded.

PAUL'S RIDE

Paul Revere's horse galloped down the country roads. The life of the colonies depended on his warning the people that the British were coming. He approached a farmhouse.

"Is your husband at home?" he called to the woman feeding chickens in the yard.

"He's back in the barn, Paul, she answered.

"Tell him to get his musket and go to the village square. The Redcoats are coming!"

The exchange of words had taken but an instant; Revere's horse had not broken its stride. The famous patriot thundered off toward the next farm.

"Is your husband at home?" Revere called to the woman in the doorway of the next farmhouse he approached.

"He's asleep in his room, Paul," she said.

Horse and rider galloped on to still another home.

"Is your husband at home?" he called to the handsome woman who leaned out the window.

"He's gone to New Amsterdam and won't be back 'til Sunday," she said.

DO YOU WORRY ABOUT YOUR SPEECH?

A man by the name of Paul J. Meyer heads a sales stimulation organization in Texas and has been eminently successful. Early in his sales life he perceived that he needed instruction in speech - making which would also improve his selling talk. So in time he invested more than $5000 in such improvement courses.

Maybe you've heard him make a speech. You'd never know that he had ever made a speech before. It is an ordeal to listen to him. He hems and haws, he gropes for words, he seems to be in mortal agony trying to explain his simple proposition.

But what is the audience doing? It's trying to help him make the speech. When he reaches for a word you reach for it, too. Instead of distress you feel sympathy for the man.

That is exactly what he wants. He does it deliberately -- even scientifically. He attains that all important empathy almost immediately.

"You are at my level," he explained.

CINDY AND HER PRINCE CHAP

The trouble with Britons is, they don't appreciate literary genius, modern style. As proof, consider the sad tale of Dennis Potter, a playwright by trade. Or so it is alleged.

With a slight assist from the Brothers Grimm, Potter puttered around and came up with a tale about a girl named Cinderalla. This he entitled "Almost Cinderella." For reasons that may never be explained, this bonbon was bought by someone at the British Broadcasting Corporation, and that genius and/or others decided it was a perfect offering for Christmas Day. But then there was a surprising switch, and the BBC announced that it was not either going to present Playwright Potter's potion.

Just about everyone knows the story of Cinderella and how the fairy godmother of this sweet young thing not only got her to Prince Charming's ball but made her the stellar attraction at the Prince's wedding. A nice, wholesome story but strictly for squares. So Potter putted it around a bit and came up with a version suitable for Britain's far-out set, including the Mods and the Rockers.

The potterized version dressed Cindy in a miniskirt and a sneer. Not only was Cindy contemptuous of her nasty Aunty and her disagreeable cousins, she had no use for anybody. Which proves that blood is thicker than water.

Befitting such a beastly female, Potter gave her an appropriate soul-mate in a Potterized Prince Charming. You could call him a bit of a nut, and still be charitable. As Potter put it: "Prince Charming comes out as a comewhat unstable character who has sexual problems because he can't find satisfaction with other girls."

Other girls?

Having created such a delightful couple, Potter provided an appropriate story. To sum it up, the Prince strangled his new girl friend. At midnight. And since this tidbit was scheduled for Christmas broadcast, that would have been about the time the shepherds saw the Star.

We're glad that someone at the BBC had sense enough to strangle this weird one - before midnight. Now the question is: What network will buy it for the American audience?

Doc. Duncan Says

Most folks agree our Nation should have expert military men who have spent their life training for defense of our nation. However, most agree they should be under civilian control, some say they are like a prize fighter, their thoughts lean toward fight over and above any other solution and are not prone to consider right or wrong. Under our form of Government the people are supposed to have the last say, party politics barred.

H.L. Hunt Says

NEW OUTBREAK AT BERKELEY

The latest fantastic outburst on the campus of the University of California at Berkeley provides unmistakable proof of the folly of trying to appease irresponsible agitators.

A policy of appeasement has been followed by University of California authorities ever since the "student rebellion" two years ago. This policy is similar both in its presuppositions and its practice to the foreign policy of appeasement toward the external communist foe so long practiced by the State Department.

Mass law - breaking by students at a university simply cannot be tolerated if real education, which is the university's sole proper business, is to continue. If it is tolerated, then education gradually ceases to be offered or accepted.

Since the riots two years ago, many of the best and most responsible teachers and students have left Berkeley, not to return. Classes have been bodily taken over by agitators. Faculty members in sympathy with the rioters have spent many class hours in "discussion" of the riots and their causes, instead of teaching their subjects.

The latest outbreak was triggered by the mere appearance of a man wearing the uniform of the United States Navy at a table provided for him by university authorities in the Student Union Building. One wonders whether he would have escaped unharmed if he had also had the temerity to bring with him an American Flag.

The minority of mentally disturbed misfits who lead and inspire these "demonstrations" should be curbed. The taxpaying public which provides the funds for state universities has every right to demand that they guarantee a suitable atmosphere for real education. HLH.

NEW YORK (AP) — Curbstone comments by a sidewalk Socrates:

What would happen if actress Jayne Mansfield were given an injection from the brain of the late mathematician, Dr. Albert Einstein?

Might it help make her figure better?

This and many another conjecture has been raised by two scientific experiments which indicate that specific information can be transmitted from one creature to another by brain extract injections.

The experiments at Baylor University's College of Medicine and Queens College of the city of New York were done on mice.

The problem for the mice was to learn their way out of a maze. Evidence was found that beginning mice solved the problem quicker when given injections of brain extract from other mice who had earlier learned the best way out of the maze.

Naturally, if this be true on a broad scale, it is too good a technique to limit to mice. If it helps them get out of a maze, why can't it also help people solve the problems of the human rat race?

Parents by the thousands will drag their churlish, reluctant children to scientific laboratories with such requests as:

"I want my son, Irving to be a doctor. What do you charge for three injections of medical brains? better yet, make him a specialist. How much for 10 injections?"

"My daughter I would like to see in Radcliffe. Her brains seem okay in English and gymanisum, but she's terribly weak in Ancient History brains, Greek brains, and Social Science brains. Can she get all the injections she needs today, or do you want her to come back tomorrow also?"

"Our little boy is fine in nursery school in everything but group attitude. His teacher says he is far too aggressive. Would you recommend perhaps an injection of mice brains to help give him a meeker personality?"

There are no end to the possibilities, of course.

A husband with a wife chronically unable to balance her bank account could well threaten her with divorce if she refused to be injected with brain extract from an obliging accountant.

A wife with a husband unable to earn her a decent living might want to mortgage their small home to raise funds to inject him with extract of a millionaire's brain.

There is also the probability that criminal syndicates would get into the act. They could start selling brain extracts of famous people on the black market, and secretly water them down with brain extract taken from Bowery bums and broken- down horse players, eager to make a fast buck.

Aside from the threat of chicanery involved in creating a mass brain extract market to help everyone achieve instant wisdom, there is a practical limitation: There aren't that many brains around. And most of the people with good brains aren't about to dilute them for the benefit of others. They choose to keep them for their own use.

As Euclid said long ago, "There is no royal road to learning."

Despite what science may do with mice, people will have to go on learning with the brains they were born with.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The petition of the four ex - employees of Sen. Tom Dodd, D-Conn., to reopen the Dodd probe because of insufficient investigation presents an important challenge to the senate. It highlights what many senators do not seem to realize, that congressional prestige is at an all - time low and they need to clean house vigorously to protect the reputation of the most important legislative body in the world.

The staff members' letter lists careful, sobering charges against one of the 100 highest lawmakers of the United States and cannot be ignored. Members of the Senate Ethics Committee have already brushed it off, but the public will not.

Reason given by ethics committee members for not further investigating the staff members' charges is that they are based on stolen documents. This is beside the point. For the four staff members can testify of their own knowledge regarding most of the transactions which they listed in their damning letter.

Furthermore, no less than the former Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach has stated that the so - called "stolen" documents are admissible as evidence.

So there must be other reasons for the reluctance of the Ethics committee to probe these incriminating charges.

One obvious reason is the reluctance of senators to investigate another senator. This was all too evident at the start of the Dodd case, when the ethics committee did not move until Dodd himself requested an investigation.

Long before this, however, many senators had known that their colleague from Connecticut was not on the up and up. You cannot serve nine or ten years with another man in a body of only 100 without forming some definite ideas regarding his ethical conduct.

That was why Sen. William Fulbright, D-Ark., once spoke out on the senate floor criticising Dodd for having once been a foreign agent. Fulbright, D-Ark., once spoke out on the senate floor criticising Dodd for having once been a foreign agent. Fulbright knew, as did some others, that Dodd had received a fee of $50,000 from the Guatemalan government just after he left the House of Representatives. One of his last acts while in the house was to get $15 million of foreign aid voted for Guatemala.

When Sen. Fulbright referred to this in the senate floor, however, his remarks were stricken from the record.

Sen. Dirksen, R-Ill., also knew that Dodd had trouble carrying his liquor, and at one time rebuked him on the senate floor.

It was also evident from Dodd's absentee record that something was wrong. Almost no other senator was absent so much from vital committee work. Obviously he was engaged in other things.

Yet no senator moved to investigate Dodd. Only after this column had published a long series of itemized episodes showing amazing connections with Gen. Julius Klein, a paid agent, and various other conflicts, did some of the more courageous senators -- Wayne Morse, Ore., and Steve Young, Ohio, Democrats; with John Williams, Del., and Jack Miller, Iowa, Republicans, diplomatically prod the ethics committee regarding its investigation.

Another reason why the ethics committee may be loath to probe further into the unprobed charges of Dodd's staff members is that Dodd's law practice is involved, and at least three senators have law practices which sometimes get mixed up with legislation.

The electorate, however, is inclined to take a dim view of senatorial law practices. In 1958, Sen. John Bricker of Ohio, one - time GOP nominee for vice president, was shown to have backed legislation favorable to the Pennsylvania railroad while his lawn firm in Columbus accepted legal fees from the Pennsylvania.

Sen. Steve Young, using this ammunition, defeated Bricker.

LOWER ETHICAL STANDARDS

What many senators don't realize is that the ethical standards of congress have dropped drastically today compared with the old days.

Toward the end of the Coolidge administration, William P. Vare, Republican boss of Pennsylvania, staged a primary campaign against George Wharton Pepper in which Vare spent around $700,000. The senate rose up in its wrath and refused to seat Vare on the ground that he had bought his election.

At about the same time, Sen. Frank Smith spent $125,000 in the Illinois primary, contributed by utilities magnate Sam Insull. The senate also refused to seat him.

During this same period, Truman Newberry, Republican, spent a fortune to defeat Henry Ford in the Michigan Senate race. As the senate investigated the expenditure, Newberry resigned.

Today, it's reported that Republicans Ronald Reagan in California and Nelson Rockefeller in New York spent three to seven million on their campaigns for governor. The electorate didn't lift an eyebrow.

This is one reason why Sen. Russell Long's proposed fund-raising through a $1 income tax check-off had potentials. You shouldn't have to be a millionaire or get in hock to big campaign contributors to run for high office.

In 1925, Sen. Hiram Bingham, powerful Connecticut Republican, permitted Charles L. Eyanson, a representative of the Connecticut Manufacturers Association, to sit in an executive session of the Senate Finance Committee while the Smoot - Hawley Tariff Act was being written. For this Bingham was officially censured.

The ethics of congress have dropped a long way from that day. And it will require drastic action by both the senate and the house to get them back to a high level again.

Wide Range of Human Interests Catalogued

That gives a superficial description of the range of books in the public library.

Many persons go to the library repeatedly for a specific type of book or for knowledge in a single area. They are in a rut. For the individual with bird dog instincts the library is a happy hunting ground.

Like to browse in a book store? You'll find the same pleasure in the library.

One way to simplify browsing and to speed the process is to consult the index file, which many persons avoid as they would a contagion. Another, of course, is to roam through the stacks.

The more the index file is fingered the more ways library patrons discover that it can be used. It is cross indexed. Books are listed both by title and by author as well as by general type. For example there are numerous books listed under the key word "insurance."

The topics covered embrace the full range of human interests.

Perhaps you have enjoyed a book by a particular author. By all means find out other books he has written which are on the library shelves. This can be a most rewarding discovery.

Perhaps you are a television or a radio devotee and read little. In the process you may have become interested in television personalities.

You'd be surprised how many books have been written by people in the entertainment and theatrical worlds and how many books have been written about them. If you read about them it will sharpen your interest in the television programs you watch or the radio programs to which you listen.

You'll enjoy the movies and the theater more.

No dedicated sports fan should neglect the library. The shelves are loaded with sports books, both fiction and nonfiction, written by sports personalities and about them.

The library index file will give you an idea of what's available but don't rely on it completely.

It's all right to sample the contents but ask the library staff to help. Some books defy a precise category. They may be grouped in some particular section of the building, well known to the staff but obscure to you.

One word of caution. There are two book card index files on the floor. One is for adults and one for children. Unless you want to see what is offered for children go to the adult file.

Supplementing the index card files is a set of three volumes that is more useful to human bird dogs bristling with curiosity. It is a set titled "Books in Print" and that is exactly what it is. These books give the titles of books in print and their authors. One volume lists books by general subject matter.

Suppose you find a book listed in these volumes which interests you. Ask the library staff if it is available or search the index card file.

If it isn't, all is not lost. The public library can ask the Missouri State Library at Jefferson City if it is available there.

The cost to the library patron is the postage one way and books can be mailed at a cheap postal rate. Usually the book can be delivered in three or four days.

Book stalking is a wholesome habit easy to cultivate just as is bird watching, girl watching, coin or stamp collecting or any other hobby. Give it a try.

Hello! Winning the City Tourney Doubles with Dorothy Templeton must have inspired Brenda Boardman because she has really been toppling the pins since then. She had high game of the week last week with a big 228 game and Jo Spitzmiller took high series with a 562. That's good bowling in anybody's language.

FRIDAY BOWLETTES

Medical Arts 4- Canvas 0, E. P. Coleman 4- Pucketts 0, Vogue 3- I S Co. no. 1 -1, Potlatch 3- Ziegenhorn 1, Nowells 3- I S Co. no. 2-1, Proffers 3- a local radio station 1.

Sandy York had both high game and series for this league with a 187-490.

DELTA KEGLERS

Reiss Dairy 4- Parker - Curtis 0, Ziegenhorn 4- A & B Pastries 0, El Capri 3, Barketts 1.

This is one of the smallest leagues in the City Association and must have some of the highest averages in the association. The Tuesday Morning Housewives league had lots of high average bowlers but it was also a 10 team leage. It was in this league that Brenda Boardman and Jo Spitzmiller had the highs for the week. Other big games and series were Brenda Boardman had a 554 series, Jean Lee 534-202, Glenda Becker 521-201, and Norma Baker 504.

ROYAL KEGLERS

Wades 4- Ferrell 0, C. D. Alcorn 3- Holyfield 1, Bank of Sikeston 3- Liberty 1, Busch 3- Mutual of Omaha 1, Malone and Hyde 3- Lewis 1, 1st National Bank 2- General Oil 2.

Norma Baker had high game of the night with a 210 and Mary Meyer had high series with a 558.

NEWCOMERS

Ruby Andres had both high game and series in this league with 173-476. Team no. 4 had high team game with a 795 and also high team series with a 2243.

IMPERIALETTES

Darla Carter was really hitting the pocket last Tuesday and came up with a high game and series of 207-518.

Judy Ford on the Auxiliary Police team was unable to bowl last week and we missed her. She has been quite ill and the last report I got about her she is in the Methodist Hospital in Memphis, where she will probably remain the rest of this week, but she is better.

There were only a few recorded splits picked up this week; Jean Wilson 5-7, Alice Patterson 5-6-10 Dorothy Templeton 4-5-7, Irene Bruner 4-5, Ruby Smith 5-6-10, and Ann Yarnell 5-10.

Have a good time this week and we'll see you all next week.

PEOPLE are also judged by the company they keep away from.

Joe Creason.

The greatest truths are the simplest. So are the greatest men and women.

Rev. Jose Santiago To Speak Wednesday

The Rev. Jose M. Santiago, approved for missionary service in Ecuador, South America, will speak at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the First Assembly of God church, 310 South Kingshighway, the Rev. T. A. McDonough, pastor, announces.

The Rev. Mr. Santiago, a native of Puerto Rico, has been pastor of churches in New Britain, Conn., and the White Plains, N.Y.; served as chaplain of migrant workers in Wisconsin and taught at the Spanish American Bible Institute, Bridgeport, Conn.

During this special missions rally, he will tell of the missionary work in which he and his family will be engaged in Ecuador. There will be music.

Being a nation founded on concern for the individuals -- his freedom, his welfare, and his pursuit of happiness -- it is all the more ironic that today our concern with the techniques for achieving many of these goals has somehow pushed the individual into the background.

Judges were from New Madrid County.

Study Reports Children Of Suburbia Shortchanged

By Joy Miller

NEW YORK (AP) - Are the children of suburbia—growing up in pockets of affluence and a likeness—being properly prepared to live in a world of people who are different in nationality, race, religion and economic background?

For four years a group of teachers, sociologists and researchers, supervised by Dr. Alice Miel of Columbia University, concentrated on a typical American suburb to find the answer. The results of their study, made public today, add up to an emphatic "no."

Although the parents say they moved to the suburbs in the first place "for the children" and "to have better schools," the report states, "in one aspect of their education suburban children are underprivileged.

"Though other races, other nationalities, other generations have a great deal to teach them, there is little in their education, formal or otherwise, to familiarize them with the rich diversity of American life.

"In this sense, despite the many enviable features of their environment, the children of suburbia are being shortchanged."

The study focuses on a community not far from New York city which is called New Village. Dr. Miel refuses to disclose its real identity, but says it strongly resembles suburbs around the country.

Growing up in New Village means a youngster has practically no encounter with people different from himself. His life and social contacts are almost totally controlled by his parents, whether or not the parents realize this.

"He depends on his mother to chauffer him wherever he goes. As a result, he knows little beyond his own home, the very similar homes of friends, the school and the inside of the family car; he is largely insulated from any chance introduction to a life different from his own," says the report.

The researchers observed that the children learned to be hypocritical about differences at a very early age, that their supposed tolerance was only skin-deep. "The prejudices of their society were still very much with them, but they had had it drilled into them that it was 'not nice' to express such feelings."

One hopeful thing, the report says was that a good many parents united in desiring more emphasis on certain kinds of human difference, such as their children learning about nationality differences and achieving respect for other faiths.

"Many parents and teachers were found eager to bridge religious differences; many recognized, however uneasily, the need for discussion of racial differences. But with a few notable exceptions, neither parents nor schools were facing up to economic inequality.

Knowing nothing about people less well off than themselves the study points out as one of the "most appalling" gaps in the children's learning. "Moreover, their attitude toward the less fortunate was almost insufferably patronizing -- a response that was not surprising in view of the great emphasis placed on material wealth in New Village, as in most suburbs."

The report by Dr. Miel, with writer Edwin Kiester Jr., was published as a pamphlet titled, "The Shortchanged Children of Suburbia" by the Institute of Human Relations Press of the American Jewish Committe. It profiles the suburban child this way: he is "likely to be a materialist and somewhat of a hypocrite. In addition, he tends to be a striver in school, a conformist, and above all a believer in being 'nice,' polite, clean and tidy. He is often conspicuously self-centered."

In all these respects, says the report, he patterns his attitudes and goals chiefly after those of his parents.

New Village teachers handled matters of human likeness and difference in these ways: some avoided the subject entirely. Some practiced "Afghanistanism"—declaiming over the conditions of the heathen in the far-off corners of the world while ignoring the unsolved problems in one's own backyard. Where they were aware of the need for social learning, they seemed "overwhelmed by the difficulty of discussing such delicate matters," says the report.

Dr. Miel indicts the schools for often neglecting opportunities to help children judge the worth of people; for not developing self-confidence in the children but instead tending to make them feel only views conforming with the majority should be expressed; for not giving them help in managing their own learning—"too often they accepted the world of authority without question."

In the report she includes an action program for schools and communities that would (1) develop higher thought processes and encourage children to plumb controversial subjects, (2) Foster understanding of the student's own community, (3) Help children attain some insight into their own values and those of others, and (4) Develop an emphatic understanding of others.

Dr. Miel, who is professor of education and chairman of the Department of Curriculum and Teaching at Teachers College, Columbia University, said in an interview that she doesn't expect spectacular results from the report. She does expect some resentment from parents. But she hopes it will encourage parents, teachers and communities to do something about the problem.

"It's a survival question for ourselves, in addition to the humanitarian aspect," she says.

Wide Range of Human Interests Catalogued

That gives a superficial description of the range of books in the public library.

Many persons go to the library repeatedly for a specific type of book or for knowledge in a single area. They are in a rut. For the individual with bird dog instincts the library is a happy hunting ground.

Like to browse in a book store? You'll find the same pleasure in the library.

One way to simplify browsing and to speed the process is to consult the index file, which many persons avoid as they would a contagion. Another, of course, is to roam through the stacks.

The more the index file is fingered the more ways library patrons discover that it can be used. It is cross indexed. Books are listed both by title and by author as well as by general type. For example there are numerous books listed under the key word "insurance."

The topics covered embrace the full range of human interests.

Perhaps you have enjoyed a book by a particular author. By all means find out other books he has written which are on the library shelves. This can be a most rewarding discovery.

Perhaps you are a television or a radio devotee and read little. In the process you may have become interested in television personalities.

You'd be surprised how many books have been written by people in the entertainment and theatrical worlds and how many books have been written about them. If you read about them it will sharpen your interest in the television programs you watch or the radio programs to which you listen.

You'll enjoy the movies and the theater more.

No dedicated sports fan should neglect the library. The shelves are loaded with sports books, both fiction and nonfiction, written by sports personalities and about them.

The library index file will give you an idea of what's available but don't rely on it completely.

It's all right to sample the contents but ask the library staff to help. Some books defy a precise category. They may be grouped in some particular section of the building, well known to the staff but obscure to you.

One word of caution. There are two book card index files on the floor. One is for adults and one for children. Unless you want to see what is offered for children go to the adult file.

Supplementing the index card files is a set of three volumes that is more useful to human bird dogs bristling with curiosity. It is a set titled "Books in Print" and that is exactly what it is. These books give the titles of books in print and their authors. One volume lists books by general subject matter.

Suppose you find a book listed in these volumes which interests you. Ask the library staff if it is available or search the index card file.

If it isn't, all is not lost.

The public library can ask the Missouri State Library at Jefferson City if it is available there.

The cost to the library patron is the postage one way and books can be mailed at a cheap postal rate. Usually the book can be delivered in three or four days.

Book stalking is a wholesome habit easy to cultivate just as is bird watching, girl watching, coin or stamp collecting or any other hobby. Give it a try.

Rev. Jose Santiago To Speak Wednesday

The Rev. Jose M. Santiago, approved for missionary service in Ecuador, South America, will speak at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the First Assembly of God church, 310 South Kingshighway, the Rev. T. A. McDonough, pastor, announces.

The Rev. Mr. Santiago, a native of Puerto Rico, has been pastor of churches in New Britain, Conn., and the White Plains, N.Y.; served as chaplain of migrant workers in Wisconsin and taught at the Spanish American Bible Institute, Bridgeport, Conn.

During this special missions rally, he will tell of the missionary work in which he and his family will be engaged in Ecuador. There will be music.

Being a nation founded on concern for the individuals -- his freedom, his welfare, and his pursuit of happiness -- it is all the more ironic that today our concern with the techniques for achieving many of these goals has somehow pushed the individual into the background.

Hello! Winning the City Tourney Doubles with Dorothy Templeton must have inspired Brenda Boardman because she has really been toppling the pins since then. She had high game of the week last week with a big 228 game and Jo Spitzmiller took high series with a 562. That's good bowling in anybody's language.

FRIDAY BOWLETTES

Medical Arts 4- Canvas 0, E. P. Coleman 4- Pucketts 0, Vogue 3- I S Co. no. 1 -1, Potlatch 3- Ziegenhorn 1, Nowells 3- I S Co. no. 2-1, Proffers 3- a local radio station 1.

Sandy York had both high game and series for this league with a 187-490.

DELTA KEGLERS

Reiss Dairy 4- Parker - Curtis 0, Ziegenhorn 4- A & B Pastries 0, El Capri 3, Baketts 1.

This is one of the smallest leagues in the City Association and must have some of the highest averages in the association. The Tuesday Morning Housewives league had lots of high average bowlers but it was also a 10 team leage. It was in this league that Brenda Boardman and Jo Spitzmiller had the highs for the week. Other big games and series were Brenda Boardman had a 554 series, Jean Lee 534-202, Glenda Becker 521-201, and Norma Baker 504.

ROYAL KEGLERS

Wades 4- Ferrell 0, C. D. Alcorn 3- Holyfield 1, Bank of Sikeston 3- Liberty 1, Busch 3- Mutual of Omaha 1, Malone and Hyde 3- Lewis 1, 1st National Bank 2- General Oil 2.

Norma Baker had high game of the night with a 210 and Mary Meyer had high series with a 558.

NEWCOMERS

Ruby Andres had both high game and series in this league with 173-476. Team no. 4 had high team game with a 795 and also high team series with a 2243.

IMPERIALETTES

Darla Carter was really hitting the pocket last Tuesday and came up with a high game and series of 207-518.

Judy Ford on the Auxiliary Police team was unable to bowl last week and we missed her. She has been quite ill and the last report I got about her she is in the Methodist Hospital in Memphis, where she will probably remain the rest of this week, but she is better.

There were only a few recorded splits picked up this week; Jean Wilson 5-7, Alice Patterson 5-6-10 Dorothy Templeton 4-5-7, Irene Bruner 4-5, Ruby Smith 5-6-10, and Ann Yarnell 5-10.

Have a good time this week and we'll see you all next week.

PEOPLE are also judged by the company they keep away from.

Judges were from New Madrid County.

Study Reports Children Of Suburbia Shortchanged

By Joy Miller

NEW YORK (AP) - Are the children of suburbia—growing up in pockets of affluence and a likeness—being properly prepared to live in a world of people who are different in nationality, race, religion and economic background?

For four years a group of teachers, sociologists and researchers, supervised by Dr. Alice Miel of Columbia University, concentrated on a typical American suburb to find the answer. The results of their study, made public today, add up to an emphatic "no."

Although the parents say they moved to the suburbs in the first place "for the children" and "to have better schools," the report states, "in one aspect of their education suburban children are underprivileged.

"Though other races, other nationalities, other generations have a great deal to teach them, there is little in their education, formal or otherwise, to familiarize them with the rich diversity of American life.

"In this sense, despite the many enviable features of their environment, the children of suburbia are being shortchanged."

The study focuses on a community not far from New York city which is called New Village. Dr. Miel refuses to disclose its real identity, but says it strongly resembles suburbs around the country.

Growing up in New Village means a youngster has practically no encounter with people different from himself. His life and social contacts are almost totally controlled by his parents, whether or not the parents realize this.

"He depends on his mother to chauffer him wherever he goes. As a result, he knows little beyond his own home, the very similar homes of friends, the school and the inside of the family car; he is largely insulated from any chance introduction to a life different from his own," says the report.

The researchers observed that the children learned to be hypocritical about differences at a very early age, that their supposed tolerance was only skin-deep. "The prejudices of their society were still very much with them, but they had had it drilled into them that it was 'not nice' to express such feelings."

One hopeful thing, the report says was that a good many parents united in desiring more emphasis on certain kinds of human difference, such as their children learning about nationality differences and achieving respect for other faiths.

"Many parents and teachers were found eager to bridge religious differences; many recognized, however uneasily, the need for discussion of racial differences. But with a few notable exceptions, neither parents nor schools were facing up to economic inequality.

Knowing nothing about people less well off than themselves the study points out as one of the "most appalling" gaps in the children's learning. "Moreover, their attitude toward the less fortunate was almost insufferably patronizing -- a response that was not surprising in view of the great emphasis placed on material wealth in New Village, as in most suburbs."

The report by Dr. Miel, with writer Edwin Kiester Jr., was published as a pamphlet titled, "The Shortchanged Children of Suburbia" by the Institute of Human Relations Press of the American Jewish Committe. It profiles the suburban child this way: he is "likely to be a materialist and somewhat of a hypocrite. In addition, he tends to be a striver in school, a conformist, and above all a believer in being 'nice,' polite, clean and tidy. He is often conspicuously self-centered."

In all these respects, says the report, he patterns his attitudes and goals chiefly after those of his parents.

New Village teachers handled matters of human likeness and difference in these ways: some avoided the subject entirely. Some practiced "Afghanistanism"—declaiming over the conditions of the heathen in the far-off corners of the world while ignoring the unsolved problems in one's own backyard. Where they were aware of the need for social learning, they seemed "overwhelmed by the difficulty of discussing such delicate matters," says the report.

Dr. Miel indicts the schools for often neglecting opportunities to help children judge the worth of people; for not developing self-confidence in the children but instead tending to make them feel only views conforming with the majority should be expressed; for not giving them help in managing their own learning—"too often they accepted the world of authority without question."

In the report she includes an action program for schools and communities that would (1) develop higher thought processes and encourage children to plumb controversial subjects, (2) Foster understanding of the student's own community, (3) Help children attain some insight into their own values and those of others, and (4) Develop an emphatic understanding of others.

Dr. Miel, who is professor of education and chairman of the Department of Curriculum and Teaching at Teachers College, Columbia University, said in an interview that she doesn't expect spectacular results from the report. She does expect some resentment from parents. But she hopes it will encourage parents, teachers and communities to do something about the problem.

"It's a survival question for ourselves, in addition to the humanitarian aspect," she says.

Richland, S. Central Win In Sub-District

By RON JAYNES

Richland's undefeated Rebels (3-0), led by the seven - hit pitching and batting of Stan Gaylord opened up the sub-district state baseball tournament yesterday afternoon by defeating arch - rival Bell City, 7-3. Scott County Central collected 13 hits and 13 runs as it won over Matthews 13-8.

Yesterday's winners will meet Wednesday at 3:30 p.m. for the right to meet the top bracket winner for the tournament title.

Today's action at VFW stadium will find Bloomfield and Advance battling, starting at 3:30 p.m.

Richland, after going down in order in the bottom half of the first inning opened up the bottom half of the second with a single by John Coffey. He moved to second on a sacrifice bunt by Gaylord and scored on an error by the first baseman for the first run.

The Rebels added two more runs in the inning as Ed Taylor, who reached base on an error, scored on Carroll Dean's double. Dean scored as Jerry Taylor singled for a 3-0 Richland lead.

Bell City pushed across its first run in the fourth inning after Richland added one in the bottom of the third on two hits, and two stolen bases.

Richland was never threatened as southpaw Gaylord kept his opponents off stride with his sidearm, herky jerky motion . . .He struck out 10 men in seven innings of pitching, while walking two.

Leonard Rampley, the losing pitcher for Bell City, struck out nine and failed to issue a walk while giving up eight hits.

Richland added its final three runs in the fifth inning on two hits and two Bell City errors.

Bell City's final runs came in the fifth and sixth innings. One was scored in each inning as a base hit. Errors played a major role in the scoring.

Danny Pullen collected a triple for Bell City while Gaylord smashed a two-run homer over the right field fence in the fifth inning, for the only long hits.

Pounding 13 hits off losing pitcher Amon Ring, Scott County Central made a surprising comeback after being down 8-0 in the first inning to whip the winless Pirates.

Matthews opened up the first inning with 13 men at bat and scored eight runs on four hits. It seemed to be on its way to victory after Ring got past the first inning allowing no runs. He pitched out of a bases loaded and no out situation.

Central put its first scores on the board in the second inning, scoring five runs on four hits and two bases on balls. John Lee and Larry Boley collected the big blows for Central in that inning, connecting on a double and triple respectively, back to back.

After going scoreless in the third, Central forged its way to within one run of the leaders with three hits and two runs, 8-7.

Matthews threatened in the sixth inning, having bases loaded and no outs, but failed to score as winning hurler, Morris Karnes, struck out one and got fine backing from the field for the other two outs.

Central pushed across three runs in the fifth and sixth innings for the come - from - behind victory. John Lee and Boley collected triples for the winners. Matthews failed to get an extra base hit.

Stephen Miles was the hitting star for the winners, going three for three. Pearson and Ring collected two hits each for Matthews.

NEED MORE WATER? YOUR OWN WELL MAY BE THE ANSWER

Is this statement true? "Only a few families living in the sticks get their water from a well anymore. Wells are obsolete in the 20th century."

It's false. Wells are an important part of modern living for more than 25 percent of the U.S. population. Nearly 10 million families depend upon individual wells for their total water supply, according to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau. They live not only on modern farms but in urban areas beyond municipal water mains.

In the past few years, individual wells have also assumed a new importance as a supplemental source of water in areas that have municipal systems but where shortages force local governments to curtail use of water. About 50,000 such supplemental wells are drilled each year, and their number is expected to double or triple in the next few years because, almost everywhere in the U.S., there's plenty of water underground.

The modern well isn't half as picturesque as the old-fashioned one with its romantic "old oaken bucket" but it's considerably more efficient. The motor is electrically powered and is likely to be a submersible that's installed right in the well, where it can neither be seen nor heard. The well itself is about four inches in diameter and is sealed after being sanitized.

There's no hand-carrying of water from this 20th century electric appliance. As the water is pumped to the surface, it goes first to a storage tank. From there it's piped to the water-using equipment in the home in the usual way.

If you'd like to know more about the possibility of having your own well, write for a free booklet to the Ground Water Resources Institute, 205 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. 60606. Ask for "How Water Wells Help You Solve Your Water Problems - Easily and Economically!"

Griffith Upset In Title Fight

NEW YORK (AP) — Boxing had a new Golden Boy today in handsome Nino Benvenuti, Italy's first world middleweight boxing champion on his decisive upset of Emile Griffith in a spectacular 15-round fight.

"Sure, I'll be happy to fight him again," said the 28-year-old as he left Madison Square Garden Monday night with the resounding cheers of the pro-Benvenuti crowd of 14,251 still ringing in his ears after his unanimous decision victory.

"We'd like to put on the return bout in the Garden in July," said Harry Markson, the Garden's director of boxing who was pleased with the $141,799 gate for the televised fight.

"It was a sensational fight and should be a complete sell-out. There's a handshake agreement between the managers for the return fight but I'd like to get it on paper."

Benvenuti, called The Intellectual in Italy because he likes to read books and talk about them, certainly had the book on the 29-year-old Griffith.

The fast-punching Italian, taller by 3½ inches and heavier by 5½ pounds-159 to 153½, dropped the 13-5 favored champion in the second round with a short right and was floored himself by a long right in the fourth,

The pro-Benvenuti crowd roared "Nee-no, Nee-no, Nee-no" as the challenger finished with a flourish, taking the final round with a determined attack even though he had the decision wrapped up.

Referee Mark Conn and judge Leo Birnbaum each had Benvenuti the winner on rounds, 10-5. Judge Al Berl had it 9-6 for Nino. The Associated Press scorecard had Benvenuti in front, 10-5.

The challenger was nicked on the bridge of his nose in the second round and cut deeply in the same place by an accidental butt in the seventh round. Griffith's left eye was half closed and he was lumped under the right eye.

"I knew I had him after the sixth round," said Benvenuti. "I trained for this like I never trained before. I wanted very much to knock him out but I'm very happy that I won. I wanted it so much."

"The kid won a beautiful fight," conceded Griffith. "He's a wonderful champion, and I hope to fight him again. I enjoyed the fight, I really did.

"But even Sandy Koufax got knocked out of the box once in a while."

Griffith referred to the former pitching great of the Los Angeles Dodgers who retired from baseball after last season.

Griffith had won eight straight title fights as a welterweight and then middleweight champion.

He won the middleweight crown from Dick Tiger a year ago and then beat Joey Archer in two defenses, all in New York. His over - all record is 52-8.

Benvenuti's record is 72-1. His only defeat was a disputed 15-round decison that cost him the world junior middleweight crown at Seoul, South Korea, last June 25. He was edged by Korean Ki Sim-Soo.

Richland, S. Central Win In Sub-District

By RON JAYNES

Richland's undefeated Rebels (3-0), led by the seven - hit pitching and batting of Stan Gaylord opened up the sub-district state baseball tournament yesterday afternoon by defeating arch - rival Bell City, 7-3. Scott County Central collected 13 hits and 13 runs as it won over Matthews 13-8.

Yesterday's winners will meet Wednesday at 3:30 p.m. for the right to meet the top bracket winner for the tournament title.

Today's action at VFW stadium will find Bloomfield and Advance battling, starting at 3:30 p.m.

Richland, after going down in order in the bottom half of the first inning opened up the bottom half of the second with a single by John Coffey. He moved to second on a sacrifice bunt by Gaylord and scored on an error by the first baseman for the first run.

The Rebels added two more runs in the inning as Ed Taylor, who reached base on an error, scored on Carroll Dean's double. Dean scored as Jerry Taylor singled for a 3-0 Richland lead.

Bell City pushed across its first run in the fourth inning after Richland added one in the bottom of the third on two hits, and two stolen bases.

Richland was never threatened as southpaw Gaylord kept his opponents off stride with his sidearm, herky jerky motion . . .He struck out 10 men in seven innings of pitching, while walking two.

Leonard Rampley, the losing pitcher for Bell City, struck out nine and failed to issue a walk while giving up eight hits.

Richland added its final three runs in the fifth inning on two hits and two Bell City errors.

Bell City's final runs came in the fifth and sixth innings. One was scored in each inning as a base hit. Errors played a major role in the scoring.

Danny Pullen collected a triple for Bell City while Gaylord smashed a two-run homer over the right field fence in the fifth inning, for the only long hits.

Pounding 13 hits off losing pitcher Amon Ring, Scott County Central made a surprising comeback after being down 8-0 in the first inning to whip the winless Pirates.

Matthews opened up the first inning with 13 men at bat and scored eight runs on four hits. It seemed to be on its way to victory after Ring got past the first inning allowing no runs. He pitched out of a bases loaded and no out situation.

Central put its first scores on the board in the second inning, scoring five runs on four hits and two bases on balls. John Lee and Larry Boley collected the big blows for Central in that inning, connecting on a double and triple respectively, back to back.

After going scoreless in the third, Central forged its way to within one run of the leaders with three hits and two runs, 8-7.

Matthews threatened in the sixth inning, having bases loaded and no outs, but failed to score as winning hurler, Morris Karnes, struck out one and got fine backing from the field for the other two outs.

Central pushed across three runs in the fifth and sixth innings for the come - from - behind victory. John Lee and Boley collected triples for the winners. Matthews failed to get an extra base hit.

Stephen Miles was the hitting star for the winners, going three for three. Pearson and Ring collected two hits each for Matthews.

150 Honor Myers Family at Reception

At a reception given in honor of Peter C. Myers, Canalou, at the Country Club 150 came out to greet one of the nation's outstanding young farmers and his family.

The reception was sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, after Myers won the award for the Sikeston area, and for Missouri before being selected as one of four winners in the nation at Harrisonburg, Va.

Myer's prize trophy was on display at the reception.

A second honor was bestowed on him and his wife, Mary, when the Federal Land Bank Association by Manager Hal Robertson presented him with a certificate. The certificate was inscribed:

"In acknowledgement of outstanding leadership in this community and distinguished service to agriculture and its related interests, the federal land bank association of Sikeston is honored to present this certificate of recognition to Peter Myers. Presented April 15, 1967, in this golden anniversary year of the federal land bank system."

Mrs. Myers was presented a silver bowl by the Jaycees. Past President John Sides of the organization was in charge.

150 Honor Myers Family at Reception

At a reception given in honor of Peter C. Myers, Canalou, at the Country Club 150 came out to greet one of the nation's outstanding young farmers and his family.

The reception was sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, after Myers won the award for the Sikeston area, and for Missouri before being selected as one of four winners in the nation at Harrisonburg, Va.

Myer's prize trophy was on display at the reception.

A second honor was bestowed on him and his wife, Mary, when the Federal Land Bank Association by Manager Hal Robertson presented him with a certificate. The certificate was inscribed:

"In acknowledgement of outstanding leadership in this community and distinguished service to agriculture and its related interests, the federal land bank association of Sikeston is honored to present this certificate of recognition to Peter Myers. Presented April 15, 1967, in this golden anniversary year of the federal land bank system."

Mrs. Myers was presented a silver bowl by the Jaycees. Past President John Sides of the organization was in charge.

HOUSE, SENATE SWING INTO ACTION ON BILLS

JEFFERSON CITY -- With little more than one-third of the legislative session remaining, the Missouri Senate and House of Representatives swung into action last week on some of the more controversial bills on their calendars.

The House passed the controversial school bus bill by 91-71, which proposes a constitutional amendment be passed by the people to provide state aid to buses for children attending private and parochial schools.

The bill, expected to receive a rough ride in the Senate, was felt by some House members to have passed only because it is not the final decision, but must first pass the upper house and then be approved by a majority of the voters in the state, either at the next general election or at a special election called by the governor.

Rep. David Rolwing (D-Charleston), a Catholic, said of the resolution: "We who support private and parochial schools should support them all the way. We will be losing our right to dictate what can be taught in our schools if we accept money from the state."

Rep. James I. Spainhower (D-Marshall), a Christian minister, said submitting the resolution to the people would cause untold damage to religious relations. It does not have a ghost of a chance of passage if submitted to the people. It would just stir up a lot of trouble."

In addition, the House passed a proposed constitutional amendment that would remove household goods from the personal property tax. There was no debate on the bill, which was passed 108 to 46.

By a close vote of 84 to 73, the House passed a teacher tenure bill, which its sponsor, Rep. Charles Sheehan (D-House Springs), called a "personal dignity" bill providing security to teachers.

It would require school boards to dismiss teachers only on the grounds of disability, immorality, incompetence or unsubordination. The officials would be required to give their reasons in writing.

Teachers would be entitled to a hearing and could appeal board decisions to the circuit court. Three successive years of teaching would be required for them to qualify under the law.

The bill has received great criticism from school administrators who feel this bill will only add to lower quality teaching if they cannot dismiss teachers without fear of reprobation.

The Senate entered the fray of controversial measures last week when it passed the congressional redistricting bill 28-5.

A federal court ordered the reapportionment because the present districts were much further from the one man-one vote rule.

Sen. Omer H. Avery (D-Troy) and chairman of the Senate Apportionment Committee, said the districts varied from 2.5 per cent over the norm of 231,-981 in the 1st District to two per cent under in the 10th District of southeastern Missouri.

Sen. Robert A. Young (D-St. Ann), who is thought to have had aspirations toward the 1st District seat, voiced objection to the bill because his airport townships would put him in the Republican 2nd District of St. Louis County, instead of the 1st represented by Rep. Frank M. Karsten, (D-St. Louis).

By consolidation of their voting power, St. Louis Negroes could elect Missouri's first Negro congressman under the Senate proposal, as most of the Negro wards in St. Louis would be placed in the 1st District. However, Rep. Karsten has been noted for his service to the Negro community.

The political makeup of outstate Missouri would remain relatively unchanged.

The bill has undergone several changes since first introduced by Sen. Avery and probably will see more alterations before both the House and Senate reach an agreement.

BILLS SHOW VARIANCE IN SALARY INCREASES

The Missouri House and Senate may be at odds over how much they feel the voters will accept in salary raises for top elected officials and for legislators.

The Senate last week passed a measure which would increase legislators' salaries from the present $4800 to $7200. A House bill which has not yet received committee approval would raise legislators' salaries to $9600 -- double the current salary.

The salary of the governor would be increased from $25,-000 to $37,500; Lt. Governor from $12,000 to $16,000; attorney general from $15,000 to $25,000, and other state officers from $15,000 to $20,000.

The House already has given preliminary approval to salary raises for top elected officials which varies from the Senate bill only on the governor's salary -- raising it to $40,000.

The Senate legislative salary raise would cost the state about $1.5 millions while the House proposal for legislative salaries would involve a $3 million increase.

"SHARED TIME" TO FACE RELUCTANT SENATE

Senate Majority Leader William B. Waters (D-Liberty) said last week that the House - passed "shared time" bill will face tough opposition in the upper house and may not receive approval in this session of the Legislature.

One of Gov. Warren Hearnes' major legislative proposals, this bill would allow handicapped and educationally deprived children attending private and parochial schools to receive special training at public schools during the regular school day.

The House passed the bill three weeks ago after long debate. It was sponsored by House Education Chairman James I. Spainhower (D-Marshall).

No Plans for Maternity Ward at Cape Hospital

CAPE GIRARDEAU --Sisters of St. Francis Hospital state that there are no plans for a maternity ward in the new $10-million hospital to be constructed at Gordonville and Mount Auburn roads.

They list the precise reasons for their decision. Given as the prime reason for the decision was the noted decrease in the birth rate during the past few years.

Presently, a campaign is being conducted to raise the $1 million needed in local funds for construction of the hospital. The other $9 million will include investments by the Sisters of St. Francis as well as federal funds and loans.

In the letter, the Sisters wrote:

"Hospitals have only one purpose and that is to serve humanity. Therefore, St. Francis Hospital must strive to serve this area in the most effective manner. Unfortunately, in planning the new St. Francis Hospital there has been a great deal of emotional controversy concerning the obstetrical department. As it now appears, the new hospital will not include an obstetrical division, but if and when there is a need, that need will be supplied.

"Since it will be another two or three years before the actual construction on the new hospital will commence, an increase in the birth rate at that time may warrant an obstetrical department in the new St. Francis Hospital. If this happens, the Sisters will gladly consider the incorporation of such a department.

"However, as of now, the Sisters of St. Francis Hospital and the Advisory Board believe that it would show a lack of stewardship by using the public's money to build another facility which is already provided by other hospitals.

"Rather, the administration believes that plans and money can better be invested by providing services which are vitally needed for the health program of this area, such as a modern psychiatric division intensive care unit, cardiac units and pediatrics.

"A survey was made of the surrounding hospitals which presently operate modern obstetrical departments to see what the administrators from these hospitals have experienced throughout recent years.

"Figures quoted were appalling regarding the decrease in the birth rate especially during the past two to three years. In 1961, one of the hospitals had an average rate of more than 200 births per month, and in 1966, this same hospital had a birth rate of about 68 per month.

"Another hospital has had a decrease to the extent that it had less than half the number of births in 1966 as compared to 1963.

"The last hospital contacted had a birth rate averaging about 59 or more monthly, but in 1966, this average was reduced to 38 births per month.

"Before St. Francis Hospital closed the obstetrical department in June, 1966, it was a general rule rather than an exception to the rule to have one or two mothers in the maternity division with the same number of infants in the nursery.

"Nevertheless, this department had to be adequately staffed with professional personnel 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

"In keeping abreast with current literature and other news media, the national statistics show a decrease of 21 per cent in maternity cases during the past year. The Blue Cross Digest stated in its March 25, 1967, edition, "Births in the United States during 1966 totaled 3,629,000 the smallest number since 1950.'

"The number of births in 1966 was 131,000 below the 1965 figure.

"Viewed objectively, would the above statistics justify the building of a costly department -- space-equipment - personnel-wise? This facility would necessitate labor rooms, delivery rooms, nurseries, premature nursery, isolation nursery, formula room, circumcison room, a fathers' room, as well as beds for the mothers which would probably be vacant much of the time.

"Observing this from a realistic approach, it would seem most unfair to utilize the public's money to duplicate a facility which hospitals in the surrounding areas already adequately provide."

Soviet Press Ignores Nikita's Birthday

MOSCOW (AP) - Former Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khruschchev today celebrated his 73rd birthday with no mention of any kind of him in the Soviet press.

Khrushchev presumably celebrated his birthday at the country house outside Moscow where he has lived in retirement since his ouster in October 1964. He seldom leaves there.

His last known appearance in Moscow was March 12 when he voted in a parliamentary election. A crowd of about 1,000 Russians gave him a friendly reception.

Caruthersville Devises Plan For Integration

CARUTHERSVILLE -- Facing a possible loss of more than $500,000 in federal aid, public school officials here are in the process of devising a plan for integration of the system.

The first step in the new plan was reached last week when the school board announced the sophomore, junior and senior classes will be totally integrated this fall.

The deicision came after discussions with representatives of the United States office of education. Federal officials were in Caruthersville because previous programs established by local authorities had not been acceptable.

In the fall of 1968 the ninth grade will become totally integrated and by the fall of 1970 the remaining lower grades as well. School authorities indicated this plan appears to be acceptable to Federal officials.

The deadline for federal applications was Saturday, but W. V. Hill, superintendant of schools, sought an extension of that deadline to get the applications in order and sent to Jefferson City.

SEMO Highways Are Shortchanged--Hearnes

POPLAR BLUFF -- Southeast Missouri has been shortchanged for too long in its efforts to get modern highways to Jefferson City and to St. Louis, Gov. Warren E. Hearnes said Friday as he discussed his toll roads proposition before the Southeast Missouri Press Association.

"I very seldom get married to a bill," the governor said, but I am to this one."

He characterized the opposition to toll road legislation as ridiculous and said Missouri is 16 years behind Oklahoma in construction of pay throughways.

"All the years I have been in politics, Missouri has been talking about a road from southeast Missouri into St. Louis and hasn't done it yet."

The press meeting ended at noon Saturday after the business session which followed an address by Rex Denman, advertising manager for Wetterau Foods, Inc. Speaker for the Diamond Jubilee banquet Friday night was Alvin McCoy, Pulitizer Prize winning reporter for the Kansas City Star and the newspaper's science editor.

Recalling the turnpike legislation had been introduced in 1953, the governor said if a turnpike had been built from St. Louis to Memphis, Tenn., then, it would have been better than to have to wait for the completion of I-55. His inference was that the toll road would long since have been paid for and traffic would be moving over the route.

Gov. Hearnes said the state needs a highway from Jefferson City to southeast Missouri and another that would extend from Little Rock, Ark., northward to intersect it, giving access in both directions.

Replying to criticism that the toll road should not be in the hands of the state highway commission as the toll road authority, the governor declared that the bonds could be sold cheaper by the commission than through a separate toll road authority.

Critics, he said, contend that gasoline tax money should not be used for the roads if revenues are insufficient to meet the cost.

"The road is as much a road as anyplace else in Missouri," the governor declared. "The law says it becomes a free road in our system."

He said he could not see what the argument was about.

Gov. Hearnes also commented on criticism of his plan for an airport to serve the Lake of the Ozarks.

One objection, he said, came from a Jefferson City newspaper which complained about the use of Highway Department crews to take core samplings at the site during the dull part of the construction season. But, he said, he didn't hear Jefferson City complain when the same crew was used to make core samplings on the site on which a major manufacturer later located."

A St. Louis newspaper, the opposition to building the runway, declaring it was wrong to take grounds from a state park, (Lake of the Ozarks State Park.)

This park, Gov. Heanres emphasized, has 16,000 acres in it, largely wooded and undeveloped. He asked how much land the building of an 8,000-foot landing strip took out of a 16,000 - acre undeveloped tract of Ozark land.

The possibilities open to Missouri through such a jet landing strip are huge and the results would outdo Kentucky Lake in its ramification, he said.

Gov. Hearnes said that soldiers have been proposed for use in building the field and that they would be drawn from a detachment at Fort Leonard Wood which is being trained to construct landing fields in Vietnam. Here, he stressed, was an opportunity for them to learn.

"But labor says 'no', you're keeping jobs from us," the governor went on. "They're cutting off their nose to spite their face."

He pointed out that the jobs labor would lose are a tiny part of the jobs that would be created, and observed if the field was contracted, labor had no assurance the contract would go to a union contractor.

Gov. Hearnes said he was pessimistic about the chances for the Lake of the Ozarks field and did not know what Washington would do about labor's protest. Funds from the Economic Development Administration are another "if," he said

Presently, a campaign is being conducted to raise the $1 million needed in local funds for construction of the hospital. The other $9 million will include investments by the Sisters of St. Francis as well as federal funds and loans.

In the letter, the Sisters wrote:

"Hospitals have only one purpose and that is to serve humanity. Therefore, St. Francis Hospital must strive to serve this area in the most effective manner. Unfortunately, in planning the new St. Francis Hospital there has been a great deal of emotional controversy concerning the obstetrical department. As it now appears, the new hospital will not include an obstetrical division, but if and when there is a need, that need will be supplied.

"Since it will be another two or three years before the actual construction on the new hospital will commence, an increase in the birth rate at that time may warrant an obstetrical department in the new St. Francis Hospital. If this happens, the Sisters will gladly consider the incorporation of such a department.

"However, as of now, the Sisters of St. Francis Hospital and the Advisory Board believe that it would show a lack of stewardship by using the public's money to build another facility which is already provided by other hospitals.

"Rather, the administration believes that plans and money can better be invested by providing services which are vitally needed for the health program of this area, such as a modern psychiatric division intensive care unit, cardiac units and pediatrics.

"A survey was made of the surrounding hospitals which presently operate modern obstetrical departments to see what the administrators from these hospitals have experienced throughout recent years.

"Figures quoted were appalling regarding the decrease in the birth rate especially during the past two to three years. In 1961, one of the hospitals had an average rate of more than 200 births per month, and in 1966, this same hospital had a birth rate of about 68 per month.

"Another hospital has had a decrease to the extent that it had less than half the number of births in 1966 as compared to 1963.

"The last hospital contacted had a birth rate averaging about 59 or more monthly, but in 1966, this average was reduced to 38 births per month.

"Before St. Francis Hospital closed the obstetrical department in June, 1966, it was a general rule rather than an exception to the rule to have one or two mothers in the maternity division with the same number of infants in the nursery.

"Nevertheless, this department had to be adequately staffed with professional personnel 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

"In keeping abreast with current literature and other news media, the national statistics show a decrease of 21 per cent in maternity cases during the past year. The Blue Cross Digest stated in its March 25, 1967, edition, "Births in the United States during 1966 totaled 3,629,000 the smallest number since 1950."

"The number of births in 1966 was 131,000 below the 1965 figure.

"Viewed objectively, would the above statistics justify the building of a costly department -- space-equipment - personnel-wise? This facility would necessitate labor rooms, delivery rooms, nurseries, premature nursery, isolation nursery, formula room, circumcison room, a fathers' room, as well as beds for the mothers which would probably be vacant much of the time.

"Observing this from a realistic approach, it would seem most unfair to utilize the public's money to duplicate a facility which hospitals in the surrounding areas already adequately provide."

Soviet Press Ignores Nikita's Birthday

Khrushchev presumably celebrated his birthday at the country house outside Moscow where he has lived in retirement since his ouster in October 1964. He seldom leaves there.

His last known appearance in Moscow was March 12 when he voted in a parliamentary election. A crowd of about 1,000 Russians gave him a friendly reception.

Caruthersville Devises Plan For Integration

CARUTHERSVILLE -- Facing a possible loss of more than $500,000 in federal aid, public school officials here are in the process of devising a plan for integration of the system.

The first step in the new plan was reached last week when the school board announced the sophomore, junior and senior classes will be totally integrated this fall.

The deicision came after discussions with representatives of the United States office of education. Federal officials were in Caruthersville because previous programs established by local authorities had not been acceptable.

In the fall of 1968 the ninth grade will become totally integrated and by the fall of 1970 the remaining lower grades as well. School authorities indicated this plan appears to be acceptable to Federal officials.

The deadline for federal applications was Saturday, but W. V. Hill, superintendant of schools, sought an extension of that deadline to get the applications in order and sent to Jefferson City.

SEMO Highways Are Shortchanged--Hearnes

POPLAR BLUFF -- Southeast Missouri has been shortchanged for too long in its efforts to get modern highways to Jefferson City and to St. Louis, Gov. Warren E. Hearnes said Friday as he discussed his toll roads proposition before the Southeast Missouri Press Association.

"I very seldom get married to a bill," the governor said, but I am to this one."

He characterized the opposition to toll road legislation as ridiculous and said Missouri is 16 years behind Oklahoma in construction of pay throughways.

"All the years I have been in politics, Missouri has been talking about a road from southeast Missouri into St. Louis and hasn't done it yet."

The press meeting ended at noon Saturday after the business session which followed an address by Rex Denman, advertising manager for Wetterau Foods, Inc. Speaker for the Diamond Jubilee banquet Friday night was Alvin McCoy, Pulitizer Prize winning reporter for the Kansas City Star and the newspaper's science editor.

Recalling the turnpike legislation had been introduced in 1953, the governor said if a turnpike had been built from St. Louis to Memphis, Tenn., then, it would have been better than to have to wait for the completion of I-55. His inference was that the toll road would long since have been paid for and traffic would be moving over the route.

Gov. Hearnes said the state needs a highway from Jefferson City to southeast Missouri and another that would extend from Little Rock, Ark., northward to intersect it, giving access in both directions.

Replying to criticism that the toll road should not be in the hands of the state highway commission as the toll road authority, the governor declared that the bonds could be sold cheaper by the commission than through a separate toll road authority.

Critics, he said, contend that gasoline tax money should not be used for the roads if revenues are insufficient to meet the cost.

"The road is as much a road as anyplace else in Missouri," the governor declared. "The law says it becomes a free road in our system."

He said he could not see what the argument was about.

Gov. Hearnes also commented on criticism of his plan for an airport to serve the Lake of the Ozarks.

One objection, he said, came from a Jefferson City newspaper which complained about the use of Highway Department crews to take core samplings at the site during the dull part of the construction season. But, he said, he didn't hear Jefferson City complain when the same crew was used to make core samplings on the site on which a major manufacturer later located."

A St. Louis newspaper, the opposition to building the runway, declaring it was wrong to take grounds from a state park, (Lake of the Ozarks State Park.)

This park, Gov. Heanres emphasized, has 16,000 acres in it, largely wooded and undeveloped. He asked how much land the building of an 8,000-foot landing strip took out of a 16,000 - acre undeveloped tract of Ozark land.

The possibilities open to Missouri through such a jet landing strip are huge and the results would outdo Kentucky Lake in its ramification, he said.

Gov. Hearnes said that soldiers have been proposed for use in building the field and that they would be drawn from a detachment at Fort Leonard Wood which is being trained to construct landing fields in Vietnam. Here, he stressed, was an opportunity for them to learn.

"But labor says 'no', you're keeping jobs from us," the governor went on. "They're cutting off their nose to spite their face."

He pointed out that the jobs labor would lose are a tiny part of the jobs that would be created, and observed if the field was contracted, labor had no assurance the contract would go to a union contractor.

Gov. Hearnes said he was pessimistic about the chances for the Lake of the Ozarks field and did not know what Washington would do about labor's protest. Funds from the Economic Development Administration are another "if," he said

Let Tenoran® kill the weeds in your young soybeans. In about 10 days, clean beans.

Tenoran kills the troublesome broadleaf weeds that come through most weed killers. And Tenoran can be applied early to soybeans —in their true leaf stage. You see your stand of beans before you kill the weeds. This makes Tenoran the best early postemergence weed-killer and the modern way to weed beans.

When weeds come into your beans, hit them before they're 2-inches high. Weeds do their worst damage then. Tenoran does its best job then. In about 10 days you'll have dead weeds and clean beans—a profitable combination. Call your dealer for Tenoran Herbicide. CIBA

As Strong As Death

By Brigadier Christine E. McMillan (R)

The basic truth of the Christian faith, oddly enough, is the one that most baffles the average Christian-- "Love one another."

Some argue that this refers to the Christian Community alone. Yet even if that were so -- which it is not--

"To live above with saints we love,
That will be glory.
To live below, with those we know,
That's another story!"

Another story indeed, as most us will confess. Are we to love everyone, our annoying neighbors, our most trying relatives, our oh-so-difficult bosses and work associates, with those who carp at us and criticize, the non-compatible, the non-friendly, the downright unfriendly?

Of course, it really depends on what you mean by love. If you are thinking in terms of that emotion shared by lovers, by parents and children, by dear friends, by those of kindred mind and soul, then perhaps we cannot love everyone.

It does not seem to me that as a man, as a human being, our Lord felt the same kind of love toward all who came into His life.

He loved Martha and Mary and Lazarus. These were His close friends. But He obviously did not love, humanly speaking, the scribes and the Pharisees, the buyers and sellers He whipped out of the Temple, nor the oppressors of the innocent, the weak and the helpless.

He could not have felt for them as He did for those near and dear to Him. But at the last He died for them, and asked that they might be forgiven.

This love which Christ asks unique and set apart that the early Christians really appropriated a Greek word to express it. Eros was the word for sexual love. Philia meant nice, kind, good-natured, tolerant love. The word those early Christians used was agape.

It is agape which makes ordinary men and women into heroes, martyrs and saints. It was agape which took Father Damien to the lepers on Molokai. It was agape that led Livingstone and Schweitzer to darkest Africa.

This special sort of love is a transforming power. It is known in the hearts of humble people who quietly live it, and whose actions speak louder than the words of those who have only words to give.

I knew a man who once had been a very difficult person, hard to understand, almost impossible to like. He had few friends but somehow, mysteriously, he changed.

He said to me years later, speaking of my father: "He made me believe that I was the sort of person he believed me to be, and because he recognized the best in me I strove to be that best."

A young woman worked for an extremely difficult boss. He seemed to be vindictive and cruel, uncontrolled sometimes in his angers and uncanceled dislikes. She came to hate him, and hate let to a desire to retaliate in ways which would have cost him his job. This brought her up short. "I am a Christian. . I cannot do this, or feel like this. . ."

She couldn't feel love for him, certainly, but she could remember him before God, feeling concern for his troubled mind and really wanting God to bring His peace to his tormented spirit.

Agape is to care with deep concern. It is to be willing to take infinite pains for another with no hope of response or reward. It is to forgive before they have repented. It is to give, and give, and not to count the cost.

"Love is gladdened by goodness, always eager to believe the best, always hopeful, always patient. Love never disappears. Love is as strong as death."

Julien Heads Youth Employment Council

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) -- Gov. Warren Hearnes Monday named ex-officio members of a state council on youth employment to help state agencies and individual employers in hiring young people during the school vacation this summer.

Herman Julien, director of the Division of Employment Security, was named chairman. Other members include:

Proctor N. Carter, director of welfare; Tom David, director of revenue; Dexter Davis, agriculture commissioner; M.J. Snider, chief engineer of the highway commission; Dr. L. M. Garner, acting director of public health; Dr. George A. Ulett, director of mental diseases; Col. E. I. Hockaday, Highway Patrol superintendent, and Hubert Wheeler, education commissioner.

Frederick Haug

Dr. Haug Named to New Post

EAU CLAIRE, Wis. -- Dr. Frederick E. Haug, associate professor of speech at Wisconsin State University - Eau Claire, has been named to the newly created post of associate dean of the school of Arts and Sciences in the University, according to announcement made today by President Leonard Haas. The associate dean will assist the dean of the school of arts and sciences, with particular responsibility for developing and supervising academic advising programs, both for students majoring and minoring in the departments of the school, and for those enrolled in pre-professional sequences of study. He will also maintain liaison with professional schools in medicine, architecture, law, engineering, and other specialized fields. Dr. Haug's duties as associate dean will commence Sept. 1.

He is the husband of the former Sally Webb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Webb of 402 Benton, Sikeston, Mo. Mrs. Haug is also a member of the faculty at Wisconsin State University-Eau Claire.

Dr. Haug brings to the new deanship a background of experience in administrative work as executive secretary of the Wisconsin High School Forensic association, a post he held with appointment as assistant professor of speech in the University of Wisconsin extension speech department from 1959 until joining the Wisconsin State - Eau Claire faculty in the fall of 1965. He is president of the Wisconsin Speech association.

Graduating from Eau Claire State university in 1953 with a bachelor of science degree, Dr. Haug earned the master of Sicence in speech at the University of Wisconsin in 1954 and the doctor of philosophy degree at Wisconsin in 1965. He is a member of the honorary education fraternity Phi Delta Kappa, of the honorary speech fraternity Kappa Delta Pi, and is advisor to Phi Sigma Epsilon. He is a member of the seven-person national advisory council of the National University Extension association on discussion and debate issures for high school students and is listed in the 1967-68 edition of Who's Who in American Education.

In debating budget appropriations, Congressmen notoriously guard their own projects dearly, but slice willingly away at the recommendations of their colleagues. This state of affairs reminds Arizona Congressman Morris K. Udall of this story: "Hanging his coat on a restaurant rack, a man sat down to dine. A thief seized his coat, put it on and began to run off down the street. The coat's owner, enlisting a nearby policeman, gave chase. The officer ordered the thief to halt; when he kept on running the coat - owner shouted, 'Shoot Him! Shoot--him -- in the pants!'"

Where did this shopping trip start?

Like so many of the most successful shopping expeditions hereabouts, this one started with a careful study of the advertising columns of this newspaper.

That way, the shopper got a quick, city-wide preview of who was offering what for sale . . . and for how much.

Thus, without waste motion or loss of time, she was able to make a bee-line for the stores that had what she wanted to buy at the prices she wanted to pay.

Advertising in this newspaper is a "two-way street." For the shopper, it's a time-saving short-cut to the best values in town. For the advertiser, it's an effective selling short-cut to his most responsive market.

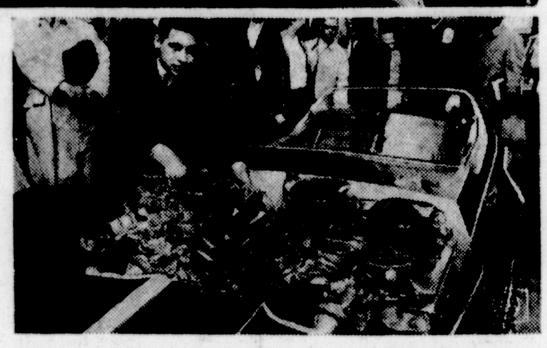
ALL THE NEWS--SOME VIEWS — FINEST FEATURES



TWO TIGERS may be needed in the tank of Bob Reisner's car, with two motors powering the hand-built creation, the "Invader." Reisner of Torrence, Calif., displayed it at the International Auto Show in New York. Two 400-cubic-inch engines give the auto 1,000 horsepower, and make it capable of speeds over 200 m.p.h. The car is eight feet wide, 15 feet long and cost $40,000 to build.

As Strong As Death

By Brigadier Christine E. McMillan (R)

The basic truth of the Christian faith, oddly enough, is the one that most baffles the average Christian-- "Love one another."

Some argue that this refers to the Christian Community alone. Yet even if that were so -- which it is not--

"To live above with saints we love,
That will be glory.
To live below, with those we know,
That's another story!"

Another story indeed, as most us will confess. Are we to love everyone, our annoying neighbors, our most trying relatives, our oh-so-difficult bosses and work associates, with those who carp at us and criticize, the non-compatible, the non-friendly, the downright unfriendly?

Of course, it really depends on what you mean by love. If you are thinking in terms of that emotion shared by lovers, by parents and children, by dear friends, by those of kindred mind and soul, then perhaps we cannot love everyone.

It does not seem to me that as a man, as a human being, our Lord felt the same kind of love toward all who came into His life.

He loved Martha and Mary and Lazarus. These were His close friends. But He obviously did not love, humanly speaking, the scribes and the Pharisees, the buyers and sellers He whipped out of the Temple, nor the oppressors of the innocent, the weak and the helpless.

He could not have felt for them as He did for those near and dear to Him. But at the last He died for them, and asked that they might be forgiven.

This love which Christ asks unique and set apart that the early Christians really appropriated a Greek word to express it. Eros was the word for sexual love. Philia meant nice, kind, good-natured, tolerant love. The word those early Christians used was agape.

It is agape which makes ordinary men and women into heroes, martyrs and saints. It was agape which took Father Damien to the lepers on Molokai. It was agape that led Livingstone and Schweitzer to darkest Africa.

This special sort of love is a transforming power. It is known in the hearts of humble people who quietly live it, and whose actions speak louder than the words of those who have only words to give.

I knew a man who once had been a very difficult person, hard to understand, almost impossible to like. He had few friends but somehow, mysteriously, he changed.

He said to me years later, speaking of my father: "He made me believe that I was the sort of person he believed me to be, and because he recognized the best in me I strove to be that best."

A young woman worked for an extremely difficult boss. He seemed to be vindictive and cruel, uncontrolled sometimes in his angers and uncanceled dislikes. She came to hate him, and hate let to a desire to retaliate in ways which would have cost him his job. This brought her up short. "I am a Christian. . I cannot do this, or feel like this. . ."

She couldn't feel love for him, certainly, but she could remember him before God, feeling concern for his troubled mind and really wanting God to bring His peace to his tormented spirit.

Agape is to care with deep concern. It is to be willing to take infinite pains for another with no hope of response or reward. It is to forgive before they have repented. It is to give, and give, and not to count the cost.

"Love is gladdened by goodness, always eager to believe the best, always hopeful, always patient. Love never disappears. Love is as strong as death."

Julien Heads Youth Employment Council

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) -- Gov. Warren Hearnes Monday named ex-officio members of a state council on youth employment to help state agencies and individual employers in hiring young people during the school vacation this summer.

Herman Julien, director of the Division of Employment Security, was named chairman. Other members include:

Proctor N. Carter, director of welfare; Tom David, director of revenue; Dexter Davis, agriculture commissioner; M.J. Snider, chief engineer of the highway commission; Dr. L. M. Garner, acting director of public health; Dr. George A. Ulett, director of mental diseases; Col. E. I. Hockaday, Highway Patrol superintendent, and Hubert Wheeler, education commissioner.

Frederick Haug

Dr. Haug Named to New Post

EAU CLAIRE, Wis. -- Dr. Frederick E. Haug, associate professor of speech at Wisconsin State University - Eau Claire, has been named to the newly created post of associate dean of the school of Arts and Sciences in the University, according to announcement made today by President Leonard Haas. The associate dean will assist the dean of the school of arts and sciences, with particular responsibility for developing and supervising academic advising programs, both for students majoring and minoring in the departments of the school, and for those enrolled in pre-professional sequences of study. He will also maintain liaison with professional schools in medicine, architecture, law, engineering, and other specialized fields. Dr. Haug's duties as associate dean will commence Sept. 1.

He is the husband of the former Sally Webb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Webb of 402 Benton, Sikeston, Mo. Mrs. Haug is also a member of the faculty at Wisconsin State University-Eau Claire.

Dr. Haug brings to the new deanship a background of experience in administrative work as executive secretary of the Wisconsin High School Forensic association, a post he held with appointment as assistant professor of speech in the University of Wisconsin extension speech department from 1959 until joining the Wisconsin State - Eau Claire faculty in the fall of 1965. He is president of the Wisconsin Speech association.

Graduating from Eau Claire State university in 1953 with a bachelor of science degree, Dr. Haug earned the master of Sicence in speech at the University of Wisconsin in 1954 and the doctor of philosophy degree at Wisconsin in 1965. He is a member of the honorary education fraternity Phi Delta Kappa, of the honorary speech fraternity Kappa Delta Pi, and is advisor to Phi Sigma Epsilon. He is a member of the seven-person national advisory council of the National University Extension association on discussion and debate issures for high school students and is listed in the 1967-68 edition of Who's Who in American Education.

A San Diego mother, substituting for her son on his paper route, overheard one customer remark to another: "That's the first time I've ever seen a pregnant paper boy!"

William C. Miller

In debating budget appropriations, Congressmen notoriously guard their own projects dearly, but slice willingly away at the recommendations of their colleagues. This state of affairs reminds Arizona Congressman Morris K. Udall of this story: "Hanging his coat on a restaurant rack, a man sat down to dine. A thief seized his coat, put it on and began to run off down the street. The coat's owner, enlisting a nearby policeman, gave chase. The officer ordered the thief to halt; when he kept on running the coat - owner shouted, 'Shoot Him! Shoot-- him -- in the pants!'"

Rep. Udall

"There is no question in my mind that I gained votes because of this position (favoring 14 (b); particularly when my opponent never did say exactly how he stood."

Where did this shopping trip start?

Like so many of the most successful shopping expeditions hereabouts, this one started with a careful study of the advertising columns of this newspaper.

That way, the shopper got a quick, city-wide preview of who was offering what for sale . . . and for how much.

Thus, without waste motion or loss of time, she was able to make a bee-line for the stores that had what she wanted to buy at the prices she wanted to pay.

Advertising in this newspaper is a "two-way street." For the shopper, it's a time-saving short-cut to the best values in town. For the advertiser, it's an effective selling short-cut to his most responsive market.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE

By Jack Strass L.L.D.

THE CASE OF THE DECREPIT DISSENTER

Agatha was so old she remembered when a bureau was a piece of furniture. Despite her age, however, and particularly despite her rheumatism, she did plenty of kicking when she read the form she had to sign in order to apply for Medicare. Applicants had to state, in response to a question, whether they were members of any group that was required to register under the Internal Security Act of 1950. This dealt with pro-communist organizations. And, if they were members, then Medicare benefits were to be denied them.

Wobbling on her bent legs and waving a cane under the nose of an official, Agatha insisted that she didn't like the question or the consequences of giving the wrong answer.

"It's unconstitutional," she cackled. "I can't be denied Medicare because I like to join clubs. Whether they be red, white or blue, or just pink it doesn't mean that I'd fall for what they stand for. In the final analysis, I'm as patriotic as Martha Washington."

Popping mad, Agatha attacked the validity of the question in court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit the "membership question" to remain in the Medicare application?

This is how the judge ruled: No! He held that being a member of pro-communist organization does not, in and of itself, establish a person's intent to commit a criminal act against the government. To attribute such an intent to a person would be guilt by association. And, concluded the judge, to deny a person Medicare benefits because of such membership would be to violate the First Amendment's right of freedom of speech, assembly and association.

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: You have insulted a very important segment of American society, and we are a touchy group. I refer to the Crossword Puzzle Buffs of America.

What do you mean by saying the ability to work out a crossword in record time is no proof of intelligence or general knowledge. You make it sound like any idiot can work a crossword while walking in his sleep. And your description of the crossword buff, "sitting with a dictionary in his lap," indeed! Have you ever tried to sit with a 30-pound book in your lap? Well, be my guest.

Working crosswords is wonderful relaxation and at the same time it is a fine exercise in mental gymnastics. So why don't you be a nice girl and give us a seven word for "I'm sorry?" -- BUFFY

Dear Buffy: Do you mean: "A-P-O-L-O-G-Y" O. K. Am I forgiven?

Dear Ann Landers: As the owner of a small motel, I am issuing a complaint against the way you repeatedly refer to motels as hideouts for immoral sex escapades.

In a recent column you said, "When a man takes a girl to a motel room -- etc.." Why didn't you say, "When a man takes a girl to a hotel" or "to his apartment," or "for a ride in his car?"

We have rescued many stranded people who had automobile trouble. Frequently we provide a temporary home for out-of-town families who are unable to find a place to rent immediately. We have salvaged many shaky marriages by making housing available to any angry man or wife, so she could spend a night alone and cool off and think things over.

So, please, Ann Landers, don't use "motel" as a synonym for den of iniquity. Thank you. -- MIFFED

Dear Miffed: When a person writes "We went to a motel," I don't change it to read, "We went to a choir loft."

I am well aware that the majority of motel operators do everything they can to run a respectable inn. They don't want the two-hour customers. But when a person who writes to me says "We went to a motel" I print "motel."

Dear Ann Landers: After several years of marriage to a fine but dull executive, I fell madly in love with a married man. We agreed to divorce our mates and spend the rest of our lives together.

My lover has now decided he cannot leave his family and the future looks bleak. I seem to be living the back street of his life. Suddenly he feels he must pay more attention to his wife for the sake of appearance. What should I do? Please give me your candid opinion. -- MONTREAL

Dear Montreal: Your husband didn't have to do much twisting, the way I read it. My candid opinion is that you ought to wipe the egg off your face and ask your husband to take you back. If he agrees, consider yourself lucky and devote the rest of your life to making him happy.

What is French kissing? Is it wrong? Who should set the necking limits -- the boy or the girl? Can a shotgun wedding succeed? Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Teen-age Sex -- Ten Ways To Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

The Sikeston Natatorium has been put in first class condition for the spring opening. The pool was filled Wednesday of this week, and will be formally opened some time this month. The dressing rooms have been finished, the showers installed, a last coat of paint put on the building and a walk built from the street to the entrance. Mr. Chaney will have an instructor at the pool during most of the summer.

Once more Sikeston has an opportunity for a local hospital. We have two trained nurses, Miss Mary Ray, a graduate of Bowling Green, Ky., and Miss Daisy Barker, a graduate of Natchez, Miss. With these nurses to start with and the cooperation of the physicians of this and neighboring towns, Sikeston should back a hospital. Think of this proposition and be at the Commercial Club meeting Monday evening to talk the matter over.

The contract for the Wallace Applegate house has been let to George Gossmann of Charleston. The Laubis Architectural Co., executed the plans.

M. L. Reed, representative of the Koken Barber Supply Co., closed a deal with the Sanitary Barber Shop on New Madrid street Wednesday for new fixtures throughout the shop, which will be of marble and entirely sanitary in every way. The fixtures will be installed in about four weeks.

The high waters of Southeast Missouri took toll of two of our respected citizens Saturday afternoon when Alfred Inman and Robert Minner were drowned in the back waters, one mile south and one and a half miles east of Matthews. Mr. Inman lived within a few hundred yards of where he met his death while Bob Minner lived with his wife and four small children at McMullin, north of Sikeston. Inman was farming part of the C. F. McMullin Estate nearby and Bob Minner, as the McMullin land overseer was there to look out for corn and other interests of the estate.

The Prayer

From The Upper Room

"Be Faithful, till death, and I will give you the crown of life." (Revelation 2:10, NEB)

PRAYER: In the face of overwhelming odds, O Father, help us to spurn the side of evil and turn the tide so that love like Christ's may rule in the hearts of all mankind. Help us to pray, not merely with our lips but from the heart, the prayer Thy Son taught us, "Our Father who art in heaven . . . . .Amen."

As a Bostonian, I am quite accustomed to books and movies being banned in our city. But the height of propriety came when I read that a local newspaper insists that its writers spell out Boston Redevelopment Authority because the initials make a word not mentioned in polite society.

Families Use Forecasts

Leonard F. Hand
Agricultural Meteorologist
University of Missouri Delta Center

PORTAGEVILLE--The Bootheel family unit is a major user of the weather forecast, sometimes without realizing it.

1. How are you going to dress the youngsters for their daily trip to school, mother? Check the weather forecast. Be particularly alert to expected changes in conditions before the kids are on their way home. Arrival of a fast-moving cold front can change a sunny mild morning into a rainy, windy, chilling afternoon for children dressed in light clothing. Afternoon thunderstorms may catch youngsters unprepared for a soacking rain.

2. Many housewifes still hang clothes outside to dry, either by desire or necessity. Drying conditions make the difference between a few hours on the line, or a rain soaked wash hanging limply through the night, or a trip to the laundromat. Cloudy days without good winds are not nearly as effective as bright sunshine. Forecasts give an estimate of per cent of sunshine you can expect each day.

4. Flowers are susceptible to damage by unfavorable temperatures. Some are more suited for shady areas and others require abundant sunlight. Frosts are especially damaging.

5. Whether it is mother's day off or a family outing, weather frequently determines if this is the day to plan a shopping trip to Memphis or St. Louis, to spend the day at the campground or lake, or to concentrate on housework at home.

Glowing Car Missing

It is an experimental 1963 Plymouth valued at $30,000 and taken from Western Michigan University's Industrial and Engineering Technology Building over the weekend.

It has a plastic top and a blue fluroescent body that will glow in the dark.

The vehicle was donated to Western Michigan by Chrysler Corp. It was taken by someone who broke into the building and took keys for the car from an office. The theft was discovered Sunday.

SUMMER BLESSING

MAY your summer be a rich and blessed one
With new awareness of the Father's good,
His beauty found in fragrant shadowed wood,
In winged creatures darting past the sun;
In salty breezes blowing from the sea,
In fields of flowing wheat and growing corn;
The wonder of a teetering calf, newborn,
Of berry blooms with bees for company.
How often treasures lavished by His hand
Lie unperceived or disregarded till
One pauses for a moment to be still,
To see afresh and then to understand
That, come what may, God truly loves, God lives;
Changeless, possessing all, He freely gives.

Space Team Appears Lost Carpenter's Bid to Rejoin

MANNED SPACE CENTER, Houston, Tex. (AP) — Astronaut M. Scott Carpenter gambled on the operating table six months ago, but he neither won nor lost. So, he says, he'll never fly in space again.

Carpenter, one of the original seven Mercury spacemen, had hoped the surgery would restore ability to fully rotate his left arm, broken just below the elbow in a 1964 motorcycle accident in Bermuda.

Doctors had told him that if he was to get back on space flying status the arm must be mended. However, the operation would be a delicate one and he stood a chance of losing even more movement in the arm.

"I took that chance," Carpenter said.

"But it didn't really do too much good. It didn't change my flight status any. I saw it wasn't improved much as soon as I got the cast off. It improved a little bit, but I think it's probably at a standstill now."

Navy Cmdr. Carpenter, who will be 42 in two weeks, said in an interview that apparently nothing more can be done to correct the situation.

Asked if this meant that he had given up all hope of flying again, he replied: "In a spacecraft, yes."

Carpenter, a native of Boulder, Colo., became the second American to orbit the earth on May 24, 1962, by flying a three-orbit Mercury mission. In 1965, he took time off from the space program to participate as an aquanaut in the Sealab project, spending 30 days in a sunken laboratory on the bottom of the Pacific Ocean just off the California coast.

Carpenter said he would continue in the space program so long as "I've still got work to do and it still fascinates me."

Two others have been disqualified medically for space journeys. Navy Capt. Alan B. Shepard Jr. suffers from an inner ear problem known as labyrinthitis. Donald K. Slayton, a civilian, has a slight heart problem. Both hold administrative positions on the astronaut team.

HELP!

Everybody has heard about Zip Code.

But not everybody is using it. Perhaps some people think of it as just a favor to the post office—something to do if they happen to think of it.

But Zip Code is much, much more than that.

Zip helps our postal workers move mail the modern way. With Zip, they can sort it faster and deliver it by more direct routes. With Zip, they will use modern electronic machines that "read" Zip numbers and sort mail fifteen times faster than was possible before!

People who don't use Zip Code hold up the mail for themselves and for everyone else.

So use Zip on every mailing address. Use it on your return address, too. When in doubt about a Zip Code, you can call your post office or look it up in their Zip Code Directory.

And if someone writes you and doesn't use Zip Code—tell him. For us. We need all the help we can get.

HOW ZIP CODE WORKS

Suppose the Zip Code is 60635. The "6" says it goes to the Midwest. The "06" narrows it down to Chicago. The last two digits—"35"—pinpoint the local post office. This eliminates many handling procedures. The letter is sorted faster, and sent more directly to its destination.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: You have insulted a very important segment of American society, and we are a touchy group. I refer to the Crossword Puzzle Buffs of America.

What do you mean by saying the ability to work out a crossword in record time is no proof of intelligence or general knowledge. You make it sound like any idiot can work a crossword while walking in his sleep. And your description of the crossword buff, "sitting with a dictionary in his lap," indeed! Have you ever tried to sit with a 30-pound book in your lap? Well, be my guest.

Working crosswords is wonderful relaxation and at the same time it is a fine exercise in mental gymnastics. So why don't you be a nice girl and give us a seven word for "I'm sorry?" -- BUFFY

Dear Buffy: Do you mean: "A-P-O-L-O-G-Y" O. K. Am I forgiven?

Dear Ann Landers: As the owner of a small motel, I am issuing a complaint against the way you repeatedly refer to motels as hideouts for immoral sex escapades.

In a recent column you said, "When a man takes a girl to a motel room -- etc.." Why didn't you say, "When a man takes a girl to a hotel" or "to his apartment," or "for a ride in his car?"

We have rescued many stranded people who had automobile trouble. Frequently we provide a temporary home for out-of-town families who are unable to find a place to rent immediately. We have salvaged many shaky marriages by making housing available to any angry man or wife, so she could spend a night alone and cool off and think things over.

So, please, Ann Landers, don't use "motel" as a synonym for den of iniquity. Thank you. -- MIFFED

Dear Miffed: When a person writes "We went to a motel," I don't change it to read, "We went to a choir loft."

I am well aware that the majority of motel operators do everything they can to run a respectable inn. They don't want the two-hour customers. But when a person who writes to me says "We went to a motel" I print "motel."

Dear Ann Landers: After several years of marriage to a fine but dull executive, I fell madly in love with a married man. We agreed to divorce our mates and spend the rest of our lives together.

My lover has now decided he cannot leave his family and the future looks bleak. I seem to be living the back street of his life. Suddenly he feels he must pay more attention to his wife for the sake of appearance. What should I do? Please give me your candid opinion. -- MONTREAL

Dear Montreal: Your husband didn't have to do much twisting, the way I read it. My candid opinion is that you ought to wipe the egg off your face and ask your husband to take you back. If he agrees, consider yourself lucky and devote the rest of your life to making him happy.

What is French kissing? Is it wrong? Who should set the necking limits -- the boy or the girl? Can a shotgun wedding succeed? Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Teen-age Sex -- Ten Ways To Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE
By Jack Strass L.L.D.

THE CASE OF THE DECREPIT DISSENTER

Agatha was so old she remembered when a bureau was a piece of furniture. Despite her age, however, and particularly despite her rheumatism, she did plenty of kicking when she read the form she had to sign in order to apply for Medicare. Applicants had to state, in response to a question, whether they were members of any group that was required to register under the Internal Security Act of 1950. This dealt with pro-communist organizations. And, if they were members, then Medicare benefits were to be denied them.

Wobbling on her bent legs and waving a cane under the nose of an official, Agatha insisted that she didn't like the question or the consequences of giving the wrong answer.

"It's unconstitutional," she cackled. "I can't be denied Medicare because I like to join clubs. Whether they be red, white or blue, or just pink it doesn't mean that I'd fall for what they stand for. In the final analysis, I'm as patriotic as Martha Washington."

Popping mad, Agatha attacked the validity of the question in court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit the "membership question" to remain in the Medicare application?

This is how the judge ruled: No! He held that being a member of pro-communist organization does not, in and of itself, establish a person's intent to commit a criminal act against the government. To attribute such an intent to a person would be guilt by association. And, concluded the judge, to deny a person Medicare benefits because of such membership would be to violate the First Amendment's right of freedom of speech, assembly and association.

Looking Back Over The Years

The Sikeston Natatorium has been put in first class condition for the spring opening. The pool was filled Wednesday of this week, and will be formally opened some time this month. The dressing rooms have been finished, the showers installed, a last coat of paint put on the building and a walk built from the street to the entrance. Mr. Chaney will have an instructor at the pool during most of the summer.

Once more Sikeston has an opportunity for a local hospital. We have two trained nurses, Miss Mary Ray, a graduate of Bowling Green, Ky., and Miss Daisy Barker, a graduate of Natchez, Miss. With these nurses to start with and the cooperation of the physicians of this and neighboring towns, Sikeston should back a hospital. Think of this proposition and be at the Commercial Club meeting Monday evening to talk the matter over.

The contract for the Wallace Applegate house has been let to George Gossmann of Charleston. The Laubis Architectural Co., executed the plans.

M. L. Reed, representative of the Koken Barber Supply Co., closed a deal with the Sanitary Barber Shop on New Madrid street Wednesday for new fixtures throughout the shop, which will be of marble and entirely sanitary in every way. The fixtures will be installed in about four weeks.

The high waters of Southeast Missouri took toll of two of our respected citizens Saturday afternoon when Alfred Inman and Robert Minner were drowned in the back waters, one mile south and one and a half miles east of Matthews. Mr. Inman lived within a few hundred yards of where he met his death while Bob Minner lived with his wife and four small children at McMullin, north of Sikeston. Inman was farming part of the C. F. McMullin Estate nearby and Bob Minner, as the McMullin land overseer was there to look out for corn and other interests of the estate.

The Prayer
From The Upper Room

"Be Faithful, till death, and I will give you the crown of life." (Revelation 2:10, NEB)

PRAYER: In the face of overwhelming odds, O Father, help us to spurn the side of evil and turn the tide so that love like Christ's may rule in the hearts of all mankind. Help us to pray, not merely with our lips but from the heart, the prayer Thy Son taught us, "Our Father who art in heaven . . . . Amen."

As a Bostonian, I am quite accustomed to books and movies being banned in our city. But the height of propriety came when I read that a local newspaper insists that its writers spell out Boston Redevelopment Authority because the initials make a word not mentioned in polite society.

Families Use Forecasts

Leonard F. Hand
Agricultural Meteorologist
University of Missouri Delta Center

PORTAGEVILLE--The Boot-heel family unit is a major user of the weather forecast, sometimes without realizing it.

1. How are you going to dress the youngsters for their daily trip to school, mother? Check the weather forecast. Be particularly alert to expected changes in conditions before the kids are on their way home. Arrival of a fast-moving cold front can change a sunny mild morning into a rainy, windy, chilling afternoon for children dressed in light clothing. Afternoon thunderstorms may catch youngsters unprepared for a soacking rain.

2. Many housewifes still hang clothes outside to dry, either by desire or necessity. Drying conditions make the difference between a few hours on the line, or a rain soaked wash hanging limply through the night, or a trip to the laundromat. Cloudy days without good winds are not nearly as effective as bright sunshine. Forecasts give an estimate of per cent of sunshine you can expect each day.

4. Flowers are susceptible to damage by unfavorable temperatures. Some are more suited for shady areas and others require abundant sunlight. Frosts are especially damaging.

5. Whether it is mother's day off or a family outing, weather frequently determines if this is the day to plan a shopping trip to Memphis or St. Louis, to spend the day at the campground or lake, or to concentrate on housework at home.

Glowing Car Missing

It is an experimental 1963 Plymouth valued at $30,000 and taken from Western Michigan University's Industrial and Engineering Technology Building over the weekend.

It has a plastic top and a blue fluroescent body that will glow in the dark.

The vehicle was donated to Western Michigan by Chrysler Corp. It was taken by someone who broke into the building and took keys for the car from an office. The theft was discovered Sunday.

SUMMER BLESSING

MAY your summer be a rich and blessed one
With new awareness of the Father's good,
His beauty found in fragrant shadowed wood,
In winged creatures darting past the sun;
In salty breezes blowing from the sea,
In fields of flowing wheat and growing corn;
The wonder of a teetering calf, newborn,
Of berry blooms with bees for company.
How often treasures lavished by His hand
Lie unperceived or disregarded till
One pauses for a moment to be still,
To see afresh and then to understand
That, come what may, God truly loves, God lives;
Changeless, possessing all, He freely gives.

Space Team Appears Lost Carpenter's Bid to Rejoin

MANNED SPACE CENTER, Houston, Tex. (AP) — Astronaut M. Scott Carpenter gambled on the operating table six months ago, but he neither won nor lost. So, he says, he'll never fly in space again.

Carpenter, one of the original seven Mercury spacemen, had hoped the surgery would restore ability to fully rotate his left arm, broken just below the elbow in a 1964 motorcycle accident in Bermuda.

Doctors had told him that if he was to get back on space flying status the arm must be mended. However, the operation would be a delicate one and he stood a chance of losing even more movement in the arm.

"I took that chance," Carpenter said.

"But it didn't really do too much good. It didn't change my flight status any. I saw it wasn't improved much as soon as I got the cast off. It improved a little bit, but I think it's probably at a standstill now."

Navy Cmdr. Carpenter, who will be 42 in two weeks, said in an interview that apparently nothing more can be done to correct the situation.

Asked if this meant that he had given up all hope of flying again, he replied: "In a spacecraft, yes."

Carpenter, a native of Boulder, Colo., became the second American to orbit the earth on May 24, 1962, by flying a three-orbit Mercury mission. In 1965, he took time off from the space program to participate as an aquanaut in the Sealab project, spending 30 days in a sunken laboratory on the bottom of the Pacific Ocean just off the California coast.

Carpenter said he would continue in the space program so long as "I've still got work to do and it still fascinates me."

Two others have been disqualified medically for space journeys. Navy Capt. Alan B. Shepard Jr. suffers from an inner ear problem known as labyrinthitis. Donald K. Slayton, a civilian, has a slight heart problem. Both hold administrative positions on the astronaut team.

Air Force Lt. Col. Virgil L. Grissom, perished with two younger astronauts in the Apollo 1 spaceship fire Jan. 27. The seventh, retired Marine Col. John H. Glenn Jr., resigned three years ago.

HELP!

Everybody has heard about Zip Code.

But not everybody is using it. Perhaps some people think of it as just a favor to the post office—something to do if they happen to think of it.

But Zip Code is much, much more than that.

Zip helps our postal workers move mail the modern way. With Zip, they can sort it faster and deliver it by more direct routes. With Zip, they will use modern electronic machines that "read" Zip numbers and sort mail fifteen times faster than was possible before!

People who don't use Zip Code hold up the mail for themselves and for everyone else.

So use Zip on every mailing address. Use it on your return address, too. When in doubt about a Zip Code, you can call your post office or look it up in their Zip Code Directory.

And if someone writes you and doesn't use Zip Code—tell him. For us. We need all the help we can get.

HOW ZIP CODE WORKS

Suppose the Zip Code is 60635. The "6" says it goes to the Midwest. The "06" narrows it down to Chicago. The last two digits—"35"—pinpoint the local post office. This eliminates many handling procedures. The letter is sorted faster, and sent more directly to its destination.

Today In U. S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Tuesday, April 18, the 108th day of 1967. There are 257 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1775, Paul Revere made his famous ride to warn the American colonists of the approach of British troops from Boston.

On this date:

In 1906, the great San Francisco earthquake and fire occurred.

In 1942, 16 overloaded B25s took off from the deck of the carrier Hornet. Led by Lt. Gen. James Doolittle, they attacked Tokyo and other Japanese cities in the first effort to bring the war to the Japanese homeland.

In 1946, the League of Nations came to an official end.

Ten years ago — President Dwight Eisenhower reduced his budget appropriations request to Congress by $1.342 billion.

Five years ago — The American delegation at the 17-nation disarmament conference in Geneva submitted for consideration a three-stage program to achieve general disarmament over a period of several years.

One year ago — Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., suggested that Japan or Burma take the lead in bringing about Vietnam peace negotiations which would include the United States, Red China, North Vietnam and South Vietnam.

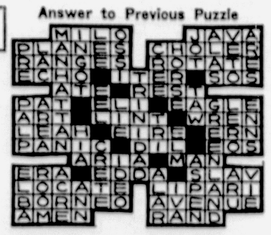
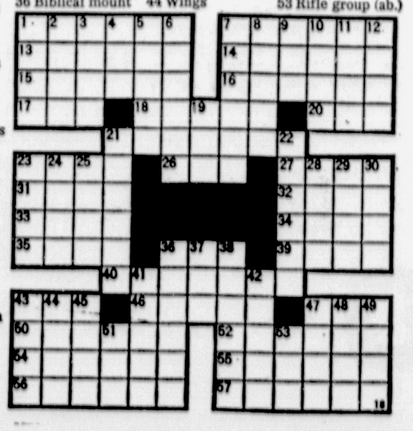
Answer to Previous Puzzle





Today In U. S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Tuesday, April 18, the 108th day of 1967. There are 257 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1775, Paul Revere made his famous ride to warn the American colonists of the approach of British troops from Boston.

On this date:

In 1906, the great San Francisco earthquake and fire occurred.

In 1942, 16 overloaded B25s took off from the deck of the carrier Hornet. Led by Lt. Gen. James Doolittle, they attacked Tokyo and other Japanese cities in the first effort to bring the war to the Japanese homeland.

In 1946, the League of Nations came to an official end.

Ten years ago — President Dwight Eisenhower reduced his budget appropriations request to Congress by $1.342 billion.

Five years ago — The American delegation at the 17-nation disarmament conference in Geneva submitted for consideration a three-stage program to achieve general disarmament over a period of several years.

One year ago — Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., suggested that Japan or Burma take the lead in bringing about Vietnam peace negotiations which would include the United States, Red China, North Vietnam and South Vietnam.

souri expects her University to do research and service in the direct betterment of the social and economic life of the state."

"May I express my fondest hope that in unison we may carry this fine University forward to its rightful destiny.

President Weaver spoke at formal ceremonies at Brewer Field House following an inaugural procession in which participated hundreds of educational leaders in academic robes, including residents of more than 60 major educational institutions. The day-long program also included a luncheon at which Gov. Warren E. Hearnes spoke and a reception for delegates and guests.

The governor outlined the "many-faceted" aspects of the institution's research programs, and quoted a national magazine as describing the activities at M. U. as "Missouri's upward reach."

"I like to think that the 'upward reach' of this university is inseparable from the aspirations and goals of our state."

Dr. Weaver was on the faculties of six mid-western schools before becoming president of the University last September upon retirement after an 11-year tenure by President Elmer Ellis.

cycles. City Attorney Paul McGee was instructed to check into the ordinance to see if it covers motorcycles. The council agreed that motorcycles should have stickers.

Street pavement repair for South Park lane from the L and M store to Elder Manufacturing Company and for Grant street from Walnut past the high school to the city limits was discussed. Cost of repairs is about $25,880. The street and alley committee is to study the matter and report at the next meeting.

Bids for $250,000 in industrial bonds were opened at 2 p.m. today. The bids are for construction of a new International Hat Company plant. The bond issue was passed Jan. 31.

Mayor Willis Conner read a letter of resignation from Marvin E. Jones from the library board and the city planning commission. Jones has resigned to accept a position on the Missouri Public Service Commission at Jefferson City. Bud Davis was appointed to replace Jones on the library board and planning commission.

Howard Hill was reappointed to a four-year term on the housing authority board, Dr. E. G. Bailey Jr., was reappointed to the airport board.

Mayor Conner reported that the city had a $4,000 certificate of time deposit with Dexter National bank which is due April 24. The council voted to renew the certificate for one year. The certificate is for factory rent and draws 5 per cent interest.

The annual spring cleanup campaign will be held May 15-16 in ward 1, May 17-18 in ward 2 and May 19 and 21 in ward 3.

Mayor Conner reported that a bed, hoist and sides were installed on a truck purchased by the city. Total cost of the improvements was $907.

A motion was approved to purchase a wrought iron overhead entrance to the city cemetery for $450. The council also approved a bill for $225 submitted by City Attorney Paul McGee for legal fees and preparation of the swimming pool and park improvement bonds.

A resolution was passed to post 25 mile-per-hour speed limit signs on Clement and Nelson streets in the Nelson addition. Residents had complained that motorcyclists were racing on these streets.

It was not until six years later in the summer of 1966 that they decided to try again.

Scott County Prosecuting Attorney Fielding Potashnick was asked to find out if they were still an incorporated town or if they would have to start all over again. Attorney General Norman Anderson ruled the town incorporated.

The matter rested there until March 30 when the surviving members of the original board called a town meeting and re - organized. The survivors of the first board, Jefferson, Cain, Moore and Hampton, were sworn in. They elected Cain chairman pro tem and C. D. Pugh clerk. The board passed an ordinance calling for the special election.

The two candidates receiving the highest number of votes will serve until April 1969. The three candidates receiving the next highest number of votes will serve until the general election in April of 1968.

The people and board have expressed a desire to improve their town.

The community is eligible to adopt a tax, not to exceed 50 cents per $100 property valuation. Two electric utilities serve the town the Scott-New-Madrid Mississippi Cooperative Association and the Missouri Utilities. Neither utility has paid any franchise taxes. As an incorporated town Haywood City should receive its portion of the state gasoline tax.

Residents say they are going to explore the possibilities of a federal government loan or grant to finance improvements in addition to relying on tax money.

Tennessean Leaves

Horace W. Shepherd, 43, Nashville, was arrested by police Monday on West Malone and charged with public intoxication. He was given a choice of 30 days in jail or one year out of town by city court Judge E.R. Schrader. Shepherd left town.

souri expects her University to do research and service in the direct betterment of the social and economic life of the state."

"May I express my fondest hope that in unison we may carry this fine University forward to its rightful destiny.

President Weaver spoke at formal ceremonies at Brewer Field House following an inaugural procession in which participated hundreds of educational leaders in academic robes, including residents of more than 60 major educational institutions. The day-long program also included a luncheon at which Gov. Warren E. Hearnes spoke and a reception for delegates and guests.

The governor outlined the "many-faceted" aspects of the institution's research programs, and quoted a national magazine as describing the activities at M. U. as "Missouri's upward reach."

"I like to think that the 'upward reach' of this university is inseparable from the aspirations and goals of our state."

Dr. Weaver was on the faculties of six mid-western schools before becoming president of the University last September upon retirement after an 11-year tenure by President Elmer Ellis.

It was not until six years later in the summer of 1966 that they decided to try again.

Scott County Prosecuting Attorney Fielding Potashnick was asked to find out if they were still an incorporated town or if they would have to start all over again. Attorney General Norman Anderson ruled the town incorporated.

The matter rested there until March 30 when the surviving members of the original board called a town meeting and re - organized. The survivors of the first board, Jefferson, Cain, Moore and Hampton, were sworn in. They elected Cain chairman pro tem and C. D. Pugh clerk. The board passed an ordinance calling for the special election.

The two candidates receiving the highest number of votes will serve until April 1969. The three candidates receiving the next highest number of votes will serve until the general election in April of 1968.

The people and board have expressed a desire to improve their town.

The community is eligible to adopt a tax, not to exceed 50 cents per $100 property valuation. Two electric utilities serve the town the Scott-New-Madrid Mississippi Cooperative Association and the Missouri Utilities. Neither utility has paid any franchise taxes. As an incorporated town Haywood City should receive its portion of the state gasoline tax.

Residents say they are going to explore the possibilities of a federal government loan or grant to finance improvements in addition to relying on tax money.

Tennessean Leaves

Horace W. Shepherd, 43, Nashville, was arrested by police Monday on West Malone and charged with public intoxication. He was given a choice of 30 days in jail or one year out of town by city court Judge E.R. Schrader. Shepherd left town.
